TCT GUILLOTINE LEAGUE - WEEK 6

LATE SCRATCH, EARLY GRAVE

DJ Moore's 3:03 inactive sends Ocean Clams scrambling

AUSTIN EKELER ANSWERS THE EMERGENCY CALL - AND SCORES 1.7

THE EDITOR BECOMES THE HEADLINE

OCEAN CLAMS: 42.68 | NEXT LOWEST: 69.38 | FINAL MARGIN: 26.70

THE WEEKLY NEWSPAPER WILL CONTINUE. THE TEAM WILL NOT.

THE 82-MINUTE AMBUSH

WHAT ACTUALLY HAPPENED

DJ Moore entered Sunday as questionable after one limited practice. Buffalo did not declare him inactive until 3:03 p.m., just 82 minutes before the 4:25 kickoff in Las Vegas. Ocean Clams had to find a late-window replacement immediately.

Austin Ekeler was the emergency option. He scored 1.7 points. That was miserable, but it was still 1.7 more than leaving Moore's zero in the lineup.

3:03	4:25	1.7	42.68
MOORE RULED OUT	BUFFALO KICKOFF	EKELER'S RESCUE	FINAL SCORE

WHY HUNTER HENRY WAS NOT A REAL LATE SWAP

Henry scored 12.8, but New England kicked off at 1:00. His roster slot was already locked more than two hours before Moore's status became official. Saying Chris should have inserted Henry after the announcement would require time travel, which Sleeper still does not support.

THE HINDSIGHT LINEUP

After every score was known, Ocean Clams' mathematical best lineup totaled 74.48: C.J. Stroud, Omarion Hampton, Chris Rodriguez, Nico Collins, Chris Godwin, Hunter Henry, Brock Bowers and Ladd McConkey. That lineup survives by 5.10. It is useful trivia, not a fair description of the decision available at 3:03.

WEEK 6 DISPATCHES

MUX BUILDS THE SUPERTEAM: Matt Markey posted 132.90 behind Kenneth Walker's 26.9, Kyle Pitts' 20.5, Jonathan Taylor's 20.1 and Chuba Hubbard's 18.6. He beat Ocean Clams by 90.22 points.

SHOUGH'S REVENGE: One week after Tyler Shough's 1.84 helped execute Dan Fuller, Joe started him and received 26.96. The same quarterback went from murder weapon to life raft in seven days.

KAT REFUSES TO DIE: Kat survived again at 70.56, only 1.18 above Maddux. The three-tight-end experiment finally ended, although Darren Waller still supplied a zero for old times' sake.

MADDUX GETS THE REAL SCARE: Cam Skattebo's zero left Pray to the Sun God at 69.38. In any normal guillotine week, that score should have ended the season. Ocean Clams made it look secure.

PHIL BUYS THE WHOLE FUNERAL HOME

Phil (maybe) spent every remaining dollar of his $950 bankroll: $670 for Brock Bowers, $252 for Nico Collins and $28 for Tyrone Tracy. The math is perfect. The wallet is now a historical artifact.

THE REST OF THE ESTATE SALE

Omarion Hampton	Dirty D / Nick	$17
