WHOLE HOG FESTIVAL

PAM WINDSOR

Organizers have been working for months, and now everything is ready for the annual John Maher Builders Whole Hog Festival. Mark your calendars for Saturday, October 11th.

Held on the grounds of the historic Oaklawn Mansion, the family-friendly event has become an annual tradition for many. The day-long festival offers something for everyone, and it's all for a good cause. Profits support The Well Outreach, which operates food pantries in Spring Hill and Mount Pleasant to help families in need.

Last year, more than seven thousand people turned out to enjoy a variety of activities, including pork-themed food and contests, a craft fair, a kids' zone with lots of fun things to do, and live bands performing throughout the day. This year's musical line-up will include bluegrass, country, Contemporary Christian, and rock and roll, with a special guest to wrap things up.

"The Well is excited to announce that on the 20th anniversary of our festival, our headline act will be Larry Gatlin of the Gatlin Brothers Band," says Shelly Sassen, Chief Executive Officer for The Well Outreach. "We're super excited to have this legacy artist who is a Grammy Award winner, a member of the Grand Ole Opry, and a member of the Songwriters Hall of Fame, be part of our event."

The festival, centered around all things pork-related, is chock full of contests, events, and lots of food.

"We'll be having our Hog Calling Contest as we do every year, and the Bacon Eating Contest will be bigger with more participants," Sassen says. "We've also widened our pork-themed food offerings with some new food trucks. This year we'll have somebody making pork chops, along with all of the other things."

Of course, you can't have a whole hog festival without a whole hog.

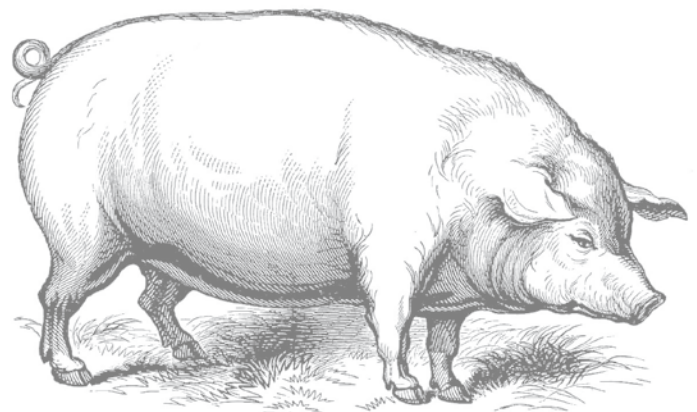

"Martin's Bar-B-Que is providing a whole hog, and they'll be offering barbecue pork sandwiches in front of their whole hog," she adds.

Sassen's husband, Tim, is Director of Communications for the festival, but also fills another important role or two.

"I'm blessed to be the emcee from the stage," he explains. "I'm also the one who's been asked to wear a bacon costume for the entirety of the day." He pauses, then adds with a laugh, "So, my official title is 'the guy wearing the bacon suit.'"

As emcee, he keeps the many different events on schedule and sets the tone for the day.

"I always say this is the greatest place you can possibly be in Middle Tennessee on a beautiful Saturday in October. You're outdoors, Oaklawn Mansion is a beautiful setting, you have food, musical talent, and so much more. It's the perfect event for families across three or four generations to come and have a good time."

ABOUT JOHN MAHER BUILDERS

For over thirty years, John Maher Builders (JMB) has been more than just a trusted name in construction—we've been a proud partner in strengthening our community. Through our dedication to quality, design and customer service, JMB has routinely met the growing housing needs of our community, but not without the crucial support of Spring Hill.

Since the very beginning, we've believed that building homes goes hand in hand with building hope. That's why, for the past 20+ years, we've proudly sponsored the Whole Hog Festival, an annual tradition that brings neighbors together while raising critical support for our local food pantry, The Well Outreach.

We've seen firsthand how collective effort creates lasting impact—from building and stocking pantry shelves to supporting families in need during the most difficult times, in both Williamson and Maury County. Partnering with The Well Outreach has given us the opportunity to make certain that no one in our community goes hungry. JMB is committed to continuing this partnership for years to come, ensuring that the spirit of giving remains strong in our community.

The festival serves as a fundraiser for The Well Outreach, enabling it to help feed struggling families throughout Maury County. Sassen says the need has grown even greater this year. They're serving more families than ever before with fewer resources.

"We've seen unprecedented growth in ways we never thought we would. We've seen an increase in need because of grocery costs being so high and getting higher. Then housing, some unemployment, and just a lot of crises families are going through. And it's being compounded by the cuts we're seeing from the federal level. The USDA support we used to get and some of the food support has been cut."

Sassen says the best way people can help is through The Well's Good Neighbor Program. A donation of $30 a month helps feed a family of four. For more information visit <https://thewell-outreach.org/>

They can also attend this year's Whole Hog Festival, which promises a good time for all.

Admission is free to children five and under, $5.00 for students six to eighteen, and $10.00 for adults. The festival kicks off at 10 am and goes until 5 pm. Oaklawn is located at 3331 Denning Lane in Spring Hill.

MAKING HIS MARK LOCALLY

JASON ZASKY

After 14 years in Franklin, Will Bledsoe, owner of Battleground Tattoo Parlour, has moved his shop to Main St. in Spring Hill.

"The move was precipitated by a desire to grow and be more visible and be part of the community I live in," begins Bledsoe, who is originally from Giles County but has been living in the Nashville metropolitan area since he was eight years old.

"The response we have gotten from the Spring Hill community has been overwhelmingly positive," he continues, and the growth he anticipated has come to pass. "We have four artists right now and we're about to add a fifth," he says.

According to Bledsoe, the shop owes much of its success to its approach to business.

"We are very much an old-school shop. We believe in customer service and want the client to have an exceptional experience, as well as a great tattoo," he explains.

More than that, Bledsoe and his fellow artists—including Brian Russel—have 75 years of combined experience, covering a wide range of stylistic influences.

"The majority of my work is informed by traditional American and traditional Japanese motifs," says Bledsoe. "But we pretty much have the full gamut available in terms of what clients might be looking for. There is no ego involved in my shop, either. If a client comes in and has a consult with me and it's not something that is in my wheelhouse, I have three other artists, and I can say, 'This is more something that Brian would do or that Randy would be really good at.'"

Bledsoe and his staff take pride in offering clients knowledgeable advice based on their years of experience.

"If a (potential) client comes in with a tattoo idea that is not sound, we are going to tell you. If a tattoo idea needs some guidance, that's our job, and we take that very seriously," emphasizes Bledsoe, before noting that “there is a big fad now with what people call fine line work that is just not built to last. We literally have to warn people away from it—almost on a daily basis. People will come in with a picture from social media or Pinterest, and either it’s not a real tattoo or there are serious logistical concerns regarding the amount of detail vs. the size,” he says.

“After being in this business for over two decades, I know what is going to hold up and what is going to age well,” adds Bledsoe, who is just as enthusiastic about his life’s work today as he was when he first got into the business full-time in 2002.

“I started drawing at an early age, and art, literature, and history were what I loved,” he relates. And he says he has always loved the tattoo shop environment. It reminded me very much—and still does to some extent—of the barbershop that my dad and grandfather used to go to, where you would get work done but also hang out and tell jokes and listen to music.”

That helps explain why Bledsoe is so very appreciative of how he has been able to support himself and his family doing what he loves.

“Tattooing has been very good to me—and continues to be.

I wake up every day and thank God for this amazing craft. I’m also grateful that I have a clientele who allows me to come to work and do this job every single day,” he says, which helps explain why he doesn’t regard any particular style of tattooing as being beneath him.

“I do large-scale work almost on a daily basis, but at the same time, I will do crosses and bible verses and names. I give the same amount of love and respect to someone’s dog name tattoo as a full Japanese back piece. One just takes a lot longer than the other,” he quips.

That said, Bledsoe and his staff encourage potential clients to come in for a free consult (available anytime between 11 am and 5 pm Tuesday through Saturday).

“Our goal is to provide the best possible experience, the best possible customer service, and the best art possible,” he concludes. “Our biggest concern is making sure the client gets the best tattoo they can get.”
