BOOK OF HISTORY BINDS COMMUNITY

PAM WINDSOR

For the past three years, a group of dedicated volunteers has met at the Spring Hill Library to work on a book that tells the story of this community's unique and diverse history.

It's involved an extensive amount of research and fact-checking, canvassing of photos, and then writing, but "Spring Hill: A Pictorial History" is now complete. It offers a fascinating glimpse into some of the people, places, and events that put this small Tennessee town on the map.

"There are some special aspects to this book," says Dana Juriew, Library Director, "and one of them is we were big on racehorses. Racehorses were bred here, and there was a track at Haynes Haven. We had a series of famous horses: Billy Direct, Brown Hal, Star Pointer, and Haynes Peacock. And Trainer Pop Geers, there's a park for him in Columbia, he trained horses here."

In fact, during the 1800s, Tennessee was the hot spot for breeding and racing horses in the United States (ahead of Kentucky) until the Tennessee General Assembly banned gambling in 1906.

Here's another interesting fact highlighted in the book: Spring Hill was one of the first places to breed jersey cattle.

"There's also a lot in here about education a lot of people aren't aware of," notes Juriew. "In a town this size, you wouldn't have expected it to have had so many academies. There was a military academy here that was world class called Branham and Hughes."

Spring Hill has also been home to numerous individuals who have gained national prominence in their respective fields.

"Coo Coo and Sterling Marlin were racecar drivers. Coo Coo, whose real name was Clifton, was a four-time track champion at the Nashville Fairgrounds, then began competing in NASCAR in 1968. His son, Sterling, won the Daytona 500 in 1994 and 1995, and retired from NASCAR in 2010."

Another local resident had success in the NFL.

"McDonald Oden, who was a Cleveland Browns running back, is in here. He was one of the people who helped us write this book."

"Spring Hill: A Pictorial History" covers the years from the Civil War to the arrival of Saturn. And it's the many different photos that make it so interesting.

"We put callouts to the public asking them to bring in photos," Juriew says, "but a lot of them were in the Spring Hill Library collection already."

"My predecessor, Helen Dark, was the local historian and genealogist, and did a book before this one called "Spring Hill: Everybody Has a Story." So, she gathered a lot of photos for that. She's featured in this book, also."

Juriew says creating the book was a labor of love for everyone involved, from Spring Hill natives to newcomers who'd become attached to this community later in life. They all shared a close bond as they worked to bring the book together.

"We formed friendships and became a family," says Juriew.

"But when you have a project that goes this long and given the nature of it being historical with many of our members in their eighties, it's been a rough go because some of our members didn't get to see it published. And we're very sad about that."

Two members who worked on the book and passed away were Naomi Derryberry and Billy Kinnard.

Juriew is grateful to past and current volunteers who devoted their time and effort to make this book a reality, as well as those who worked on the earlier history book that came before it.

"I think the biggest thing for me has been standing on the shoulders of the previous librarians, and Friends of the Library, who wrote the previous book and gave us all this history," she says. "And to be able to do it as a tribute to them. I hope they would be proud of us because we had them with us throughout."

"Spring Hill: A Pictorial History" is available for purchase at the library and local businesses, including the gift shop at Rippavilla Plantation. It costs $30, with the money raised to be used for the construction of a new library.

THE SHERIFF'S BIG RODEO

JASON ZASKY

"Maury County is really big in the rodeo world," begins Lieutenant Kyle Cheek of the Maury County Sheriff's Department, making reference to the region being home to more than a few rodeo riders, including Culleoka native Jesse Keysaer.

So it's fitting that on the weekend of July 11-12, Maury County will be at the center of the International Professional Rodeo Association (IPRA) universe, when the Sheriff's Department, the Reserve Deputy Unit, and the Maury County School Resource Officers host the 21st annual Maury County Sheriff's Rodeo.

"We put it all together and raise the funds for our community outreach programs," explains Lt. Cheek, noting that the rodeo benefits programs like the department's annual Shop with a Cop event, during which upwards of 100 local children receive Christmas presents.

"We also have an event where we give away approximately 80 Thanksgiving dinners," adds Lt. Cheek, reminding us that part of the inspiration for starting the rodeo was the need to fund these annual outreach programs. Two decades later, the Maury County Sheriff's Rodeo keeps getting bigger and better, with upwards of 450 contestants and 6,000 spectators expected this year across the two nights.

This time around, contestants will compete in eight events, including bull riding, saddle bronc riding, team roping, cowgirl breakaway roping, cowgirl barrel racing and tie down roping.

"Everybody's favorite event is the bull riding. Those are some big animals, and it's amazing to see how strong they are and how much force they have,” marvels Lt. Cheek, adding that Autaugaville, Alabama-based rodeo clown Trent McFarland will be the event’s “funny man.” It’s the first time McFarland (a self-described “professional rodeo entertainer and barrel man”) has been featured at the event in many years.

But the fun doesn’t stop with McFarland, the bull riding, and the seven other rodeo events. Over two dozen food, drink, and ice cream vendors will be on hand, and the festivities conclude with a fireworks show.

“We will also have a free Kid’s Zone sponsored by the Maury County Visitor’s Bureau, which will feature a petting zoo, free pony rides, jump houses, and face painting. The Kid’s Zone opens at 5 p.m. and continues until the rodeo starts at 8 p.m.,” advises Lt. Cheek, who says the main events will be followed by “slack”—an overflow round where contestants not drawn into the main performance lineup have a chance to compete.

And much like last year, contestants will be coming from states around the U.S., including North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Oklahoma, and Texas, among many others.

“One reason we get ropers from all over the country is we put up $1,000 ‘bump money’ per event,” says Lt. Cheek, referring to prize money added to the rodeo’s purse above and beyond the standard payout. “The total prize money last year was over $53,000,” he says, before marveling at how rodeo has become bigger and more mainstream than ever before—not to mention a way to get a scholarship for a college education.

“UT-Martin has a rodeo team,” he notes, referring to the 35 cowboys and cowgirls who compete for the Skyhawks, including several who hail from Middle Tennessee. “In fact, one of our officers has a daughter who went to college to do rodeo.”

A Luscious Lime Smoothie for Hot Summer Days

Next time you are looking to relax outdoors all day, try this Tart Lime Smoothie, which is filled with fresh fruit and cool enough to wash away that summer warmth. This chilled, tart drink will have everyone in the family ready to go for round two down the water slide.

To make this smoothie, in a blender, blend two kiwis, two ripe bananas, some fresh mint, lime juice, orange juice and 2 cups of crushed ice until all the ingredients are incorporated.

Light, fresh and a little bit frothy, this smoothie has a unique texture that may leave you wishing for a second cup the moment you take your first sip. Find more fun summer recipes at Culinary.net.
