NEW CHAMBER DIRECTOR

PAM WINDSOR

It's been a busy couple of months for Cheri LaBoy since taking the position of CEO at the Spring Hill Chamber of Commerce.

She brings a wealth of experience to the job, having served in the same position in Pendleton, Oregon, for the past seven years. However, she admits that there are some differences that have taken some getting used to – whether culturally, geographically, or even with regard to the weather. Overall, however, the Tennessee summer heat hasn't been a problem.

"My husband and I traveled around quite a bit and did a lot of research on where we wanted to live," LaBoy says. She pauses, then adds, with a laugh, "He was born and raised on the Big Island of Hawaii, so he was ready to go back to muggy."

Since the move, she has been met with the warm, welcoming Southern hospitality she expected. It's been helpful as she hit the ground running, working to learn as much as possible about the area.

"Learning about the community, learning the laws here, discovering the representative for this, how this works, and so forth. So, those kinds of things have sort of been my learning curve."

One of the biggest surprises for LaBoy has been the area's explosive growth.

"It's been amazing to see the growth of Spring Hill," she says. "Where I come from, you don't see communities growing like this, so much in such a short amount of time. So, that's been really interesting."

That rapid growth only underscores the critical role of the Chamber of Commerce. She describes it as being that voice for business” and “filling the gap” between business and government.

“So many mom-and-pop businesses don’t have lobbyists or folks who can dive into the different changes in the labor industry or perhaps help them understand what something like a moratorium passed by the city might mean,” LaBoy explains. “They’re too busy working and don’t have time after a 14-hour day to go home and read up on those things. So, that’s where we step in, that’s our job, that’s my job, to figure those things out and give you the Cliff Notes version.”

LaBoy says the Spring Hill Chamber already has a strong foundation in place. The goal is to simply continue to build on it, into the future.

“The bones of this Chamber are very strong, and the programs already underway are really exciting. So, we’re just going to tweak what they’ve been doing a little bit, elevate the programming, but also over the next six months, get out into the community more and gather input from our members. We want to give businesses the opportunity to be seen and heard, and let us know what they need from us.”

In the next couple of months, LaBoy plans to launch a members’ survey. She hopes business owners will be responsive. “I respect people’s time, so it won’t be anything egregious, but it will really help us focus on business owners’ needs. We need our members to tell us what things are keeping them up at night and give us that broader voice, so it’s not just us throwing spaghetti at the wall to determine what’s important to them.”

LaBoy is excited about what lies ahead for Spring Hill, and how the Chamber can become an even better advocate for its members.

“Our only job is to work for your business,” she says, “while you’re working for your business.”

EXTREME FAMILY FUN

JASON ZASKY

For the past few decades, entrepreneur David Miller has owned and operated a variety of entertainment businesses in Maury and Williamson counties, including Miller's Thrillers Haunted Woods and Extreme Escape Games Cool Springs. However, his latest fun and exhilarating creation is located in the heart of his hometown, Spring Hill.

"I'm one of the few who was born and raised here, and I decided that Spring Hill needs some good clean family fun—a place that could host birthday parties, church groups, family outings, and corporate team building events," begins Miller, talking about Escape Games Spring Hill, which is housed in an old Victorian that was built in 1890.

"You can see the house from Route 31," and considering that it's now home to escape rooms, it provides "some real unique character," as Miller puts it. In fact, the first theme is a Willy Wonka-ish Candy Factory Challenge, complete with trap doors, secret passageways and hidden compartments.

"You feel like you're Indiana Jones or Tom Cruise in Mission Impossible," adds Miller. "In our rooms, you're not actually locked in a room—you are mission-based. You have 60 minutes to try to complete the task, work on puzzles, open locked items, and every room has a different theme and mission. We give you your briefing and your objective video, and then it's a race against the clock—a

Indeed, escape rooms are one of the few entertainment options suitable for all ages—something that kids, adults, and grandparents can enjoy together. They are also great for group outings and corporate team building.

“We have a really fun de-brief where we recap the game,” notes Miller. “We talk about communication and encouragement and troubleshooting and the kind of things that unite teams together,” he says, before noting that he plans to add two more themes at Escape Games Spring Hill this winter.

“It does take some time to build the games, because we put a lot into them. It’s a lot of creativity, and a big production to design all the aspects of the games,” he says.

Of course, fans of Miller’s Thrillers Haunted Woods already know how much work Miller puts into his businesses, which include Port Royal Fireworks, a seasonal fireworks stand on Derryberry Lane in Spring Hill.

“We’re always reinvesting in the businesses to make more cool things,” says Miller, before noting that his current focus is on re-opening Miller’s Thrillers, which will feature more than its share of “really neat new things” come October, not to mention an overhaul of the zombie paintball course.

“People come from two hours away for our Haunted Woods and its Zombie Paintball Hayride,” notes Miller. “We drive people through the barns, woods, and swamps in five-ton army trucks with paintball guns mounted on the side. You get to shoot live zombies that don’t shoot back,” he says.

That said, Miller is enjoying the work he does as much as ever, even if being a serial entrepreneur requires very long hours.

“It seems like I work 80 hours a week, so I don’t have to work 40 hours a week for somebody else,” he offers.

And then there are the sleepless nights.

“There’s a lot of nights I can’t fall asleep because of all the dreams,” he quips. “Creativity is super fun, and I’m always trying to be creative. I’m always lying in bed dreaming up what we can build next. I really like ‘Wow!’ factor moments that make our customers say, ‘I’ve never seen that before.’ Or ‘that was super creative. How did they make that? How did they build that?’”

EAGLE SCOUT BUILDS LENDING LIBRARY FOR ANIMAL CENTER

Eagle Scout Candidate Ben Hamby of BSA Natchez Trace District Troop 13 recently built and installed a lending library for Williamson County Animal Center (WCAC). Hamby chose to do the project because he wanted to do something that helps both children and animals. “The library is a great way for kids to improve their reading skills and to get more exposure for the animals at the shelter,” he said.

Hamby’s library is now an extension of WCAC’s Book Buddies program that claims to benefit both young readers and animals by providing a non-judgmental space for children to practice reading and socialize the cats and dogs at the animal center. After completing a class about animal body language, children ages five to 12 years can then read to selected shelter pets. Registration for the class is on WCAC’s website.

As WCAC’s Humane Educator, Shannon Luna facilitates Book

Buddies and manages the lending library. She believes in the power of reading to inspire empathy and understanding; “This library gives us another way to invite children to explore stories and facts about animals,” said Luna. “Which, in turn, plants the seeds of compassion, advocacy, and responsible pet ownership.”

The library is located near the parking spots for individuals with disabilities in WCAC’s public parking lot and is accessible for public use at all times. Luna encourages patrons to borrow and contribute age-appropriate books that relate to animals and animal welfare.

WCAC is located at 1006 Grigsby Hayes Court in Franklin, near Franklin Christian Academy. The center is open to the public Monday through Friday, 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m., and Saturday, 11:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.; it is closed on Sunday. Times may vary due to holidays.
