The theme of this recital was the music through the decades in two acts. Starting in the 1920s and running through the 1990's the production was complete. There was also plenty of classical dance , jazz and contemporary performances.

The venue is perfect for this performance. It has an ample stage and can easily handle the hundreds of children that perform in these various dance numbers. The entrance hall is packed at intermission, before and after the show. There is a full service bar, restaurant and snack provider for those who are thirsty or hungry.

This show is not for the faint of heart trade it is a full 4 ½ even 5 hour production with lots of dancing and a continuous production . Bring a camera with lots of battery. Also bring a pair of lungs if you have someone on stage.

During the show there is plenty of opportunity to film the children dancing. There was so much available that I can only begin to provide a glimpse of what was performed.

My daughter was in three individual productions plus the opening number. Costumes were tailor made for each of the productions and the families had to purchase these separately. The kids practice one full year to put on this performance and it showed.

You'll need to get up and move around during the show as it is quite long. But the program allows you to be in your seat when your loved one is on stage.

This was a performance of The 1930s in 1940s version of I don't stand a chance. Our granddaughter is shown here in the center image above.

The costumes were tailor made for the production. The dance choreography was produced to last two or three minutes , but this is misleading. It takes an enormous amount of dedication and practice to perform even that length of time in front of 2000 people.

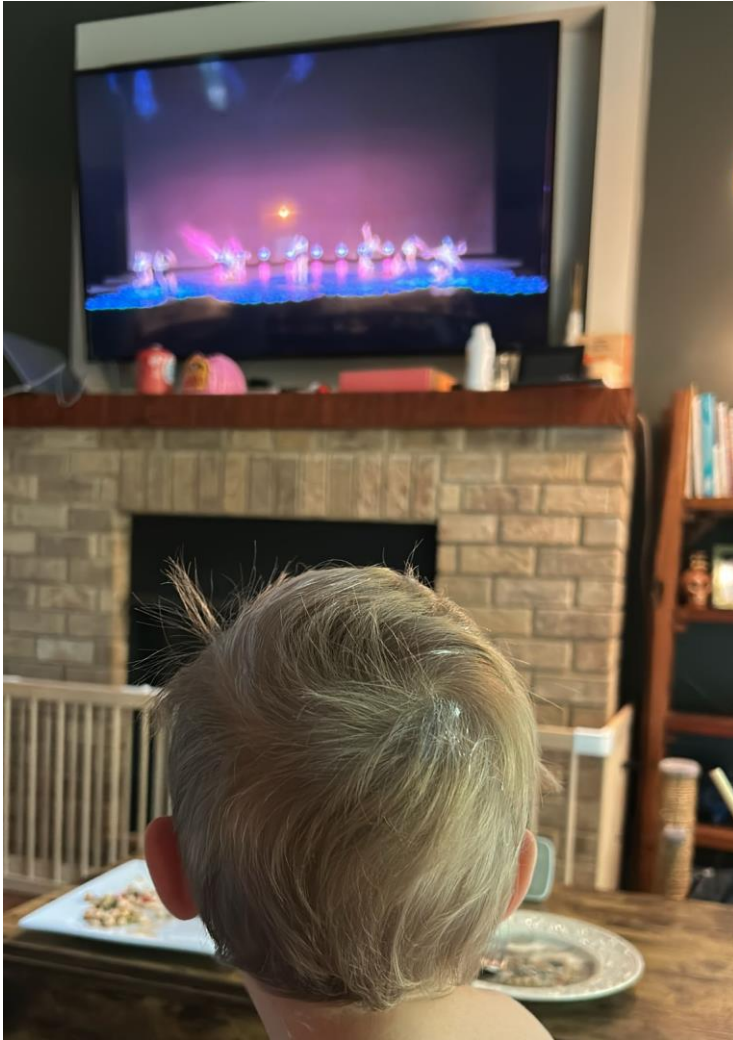

Next was a three act production of Swan Lake. Her granddaughter participated in one of the sequences.

This is classical ballet which has to be taken by the dancers if they want to participate in other forms of dance. This is interesting . Therefore, if a student wants to perform in jazz, contemporary or other dancing they cannot do so unless they have taken at least one year of classical ballet. It instills discipline and grace in the students and helps with other forms of dance.

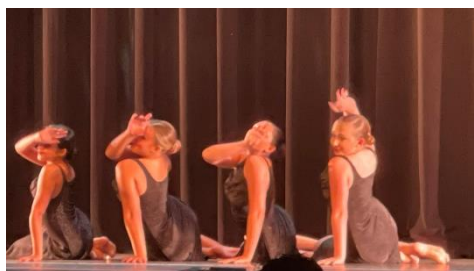

This separately from the production company. The production is live cast on the Internet. Families can purchase rights to have extended family members view the performance on the web live.

Our family did just that with two of our family members viewing the performance in North Carolina and Maryland. The production was also videotaped and this would later be Rebroadcast via an e-mail link for anyone that missed the live feed.

Finally, those that want a hard copy of the performance can purchase this is separately from the production company.

It's wonderful to see these kids perform so gracefully and even more rewarding when you have been the person to drive them to lessons every week for a year. There's such nervousness that we see in our granddaughter before the performance, but she's always a Mile High after she finishes these recitals.

When it's over the families pick up their loved ones at the back of the stage. Bouquets of flowers and hugs Are seen all around. It's such a great feeling after these recitals are completed. I know the kids get a lot out of this but let me tell you the parents are also beaming.

Amazingly this has been our third recyle. Our granddaughter shows no slacking of interest to continue. As an engineer I did not understand dance as an art form, but I have grown to admire it's difficulty, required discipline and artistic beauty.

THE END
