Our Story

Falling in Love with Succulents

Many people ask me why I like succulents?

It's very hard to answer this question as there are many reasons.

I started collecting and growing succulents 10 years ago when I lived in the “concrete jungle city” Shanghai, as it was the only way I could connect with nature.

Succulents allow me to forget about my all the worries, forget about the time pressures, forget about all the hustle and bustle from everyday life.

Amazing Colours and Forms

When you look at succulents, there are so many different shapes, colours and, textures. They change as the sun, rain and temperature changes. They make you feel like you are part of nature and you are breathing in all the energy that surrounds you. They are glowing at you, giving you so much joy and happiness.

Friendship

Succulents brought me so many friends. It's pure joy when I am hanging out with friends looking at succulents together. All my succulent friends share the same passion which never fades.

Succulents tie our little team at Susan's succulent farm together. We work through rain and shine every day supporting each other.

Body and Mind

Succulents help me stay fit! I enjoyed succulents throughout my pregnancies. I never stopped growing succulents even when my belly got bigger and bigger. The years of raising up children seem to be easier as I could always have a few minutes here and there finding peace in my succulent corner garden.

It is so wonderful to see customers at our farm in their 70s and 80s and in their wheel chairs. It is so good to see customers finding themselves a perfect little gift, grand children buying plants for their grand mothers, daughters coming with their mothers, husbands buying succulents for their wives.

Knowledge

Succulents really help expand my knowledge.

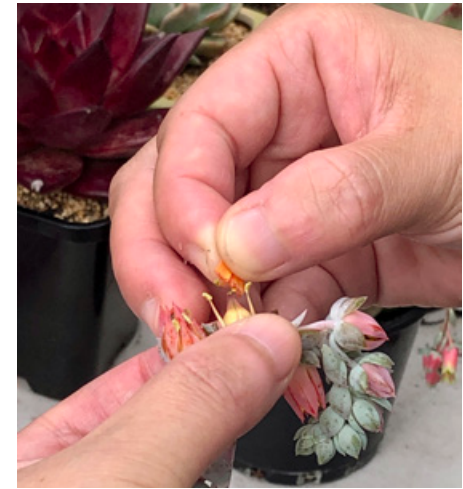

After growing succulents for so long I feel like I am still learning every day. It takes more than 10 years to learn how to grow a perfect plant. There are so much to know about how to keep them alive, grow them well, do leaf propagation, head chops, create a new hybrid, and look after the little babies once they geminated. It is not easy, but if you keep observing and learning, succulents teach you everything.

Experience

In summary, I love succulents as they are so healing for body and mind.

It connects people and nourish people.

It's very environmental. It makes us understand and respect the environment we live in.

Please come and say hi to our friendly team at Susan's Succulents farm, located at 435 Ward's Hill Road. Please come and experience the amazing journey with succulents. Look forward to seeing you.
