Part #2: 【Definitive Sample 】 What a Standard Sample Looks Like Part #3: 【Most Common Errors 】 Mistakes that Need to Be Avoided Although I listed as much detail as possible in the previous instructions for each step, I still have to highlight some of the things that are prone to error. The most common mistakes easy to be ignored I've seen in medical forms are as follows:1. Some medical examination items listed in the form have not been checked. 2. The date of the medical examination is not indicated at the end of the hospital, or only have the personal seal of the doctor there. 5. The student's ID photo is not stamped with the official seal of the hospital, or the stamp is not the same as the second-page ones. 6. The medical examination form is beyond the validity period of six months.

7. The student's blood type has not been filled in. 8.

The student's home address has not been filled in. These are all the most common mistakes I've ever seen and want to remind you. Although not all schools are so strict with the physical examination form, we should never allow the medical form to be a reason for the school to refuse our application. If you check this post of Foreigner Physical Examination Form Download & Guidance carefully, you will definitely understand what to do once you are preparing for the medical check-up. Part #4: [FAQ] To Solve Your DoubtsQ1: My place is locked down due to the COVID-19 pandemic and the hospitals are not approachable.

Do I still have to submit a medical report for a Chinese university application? A: Yes. Generally speaking, you can submit a statement first requesting permission of the Physical Examination Report from the school. If you don't have a way to communicate with the school for permission and there are still months before the application deadline, then I suggest you wait until the physical examination form later. If you are applying for Chinese universities through an agency, it will be easy for your agent to communicate with the school about the delay of some of your documents so you don't have to worry too much.

As for a reliable agency, maybe you can check this website and another scholarship website. Q2: If I am in China and I have a valid Medical Report in another format from the local Chinese Inspection and Quarantine Center / Chinese International Travel Health Center, do I still have to submit a new medical report in common format when applying for further study? A: No. According to our experience, the medical report issued by the Chinese Inspection and Quarantine Center / Chinese International Travel Health Center is equally valid when applying for a Chinese university if it does not expire.

Normally, you don't have to have a physical examination report when I can enter China in the future? A: Yes. The Physical Examination Form is one of the documents for visa processing. Usually, when the school needs to make the JW Form (Visa Form) for you, a valid medical examination report been done within 6 months is required. If the school needs your new medical form, the school will let you know. O4: What will happen to me if I had a new physical examination in China when I arrive at school and the physical examination report show that my body is abnormal? A: For students who will study in China for more than six months, their visas will only be valid for 30 days when they enter China. Students need to go to the local Chinese immigration office within 30 days to apply for a residence permit. The immigration office will decide whether you can get a residence permit based on your new medical report. If your physical condition doesn't allow you to get a residence permit, then you can't get a residence permit and stay in China. Conversely, if there is no big problem with your medical report and you have successfully obtained a residence permit, then you can continue to study there. Q5: The study duration of the program I want to apply for is less than six months. Do I still need to provide a physical examination. But for double confirmation, please consult the university you apply for. Q6: In my first summer vacation after studying in China for one year, I returned to my country with my residence permit valid. When I go back to China after the holiday, do I need to provide a new medical examination form again? A: No. Under normal conditions, students who already have a residence permit do not need to have another physical examination when they enter China again during the study period. Q7: To improve my Chinese, I want to apply for an online Chinese course from a Chinese university and I have no intention of going to China, do I need to submit a medical report? A: Different schools have different requirements. You can consult the target school for information. I know a popular Chinese university that doesn't ask for medical reports for their online Chinese class at a cheap price and you can check the details here. Hope this post of Foreigner Physical Examination Form Download & Guidance can help you succeed in medical-up. I also found you other documents sample for Chinese university application if you need.
