Smoky Mountain Storyteller

Pete Nunweiler is an award-winning author, photographer, musician, and Smoky Mountain storyteller whose work explores the connections between history, memory, mystery, and the places that shape us. Through fiction, photography, music, and historical research, he preserves stories that might otherwise be forgotten, inviting readers and audiences to discover the echoes that remain long after the moment has passed.

Pete is the author of The Ghost Between Us Trilogy, the John Wolfe Trilogy, Virtual Assistant, and One Hundred Seventy Days. His storytelling extends beyond books through photography, original music inspired by his novels, articles, and public appearances that celebrate the history, legends, and spirit of the Smoky Mountains.

His work has been featured on TLC's 1000-lb Sisters and he has appeared on podcasts including Darkness Radio with Dave Schrader, Angel Meadows: A Conversation with Friends, and Fight or Fright. Whether writing fiction, capturing a landscape through his camera, or sharing the stories behind the stories, Pete's passion is helping others connect with the people, places, and memories that continue to resonate long after the moment has passed.
