

Close Encounters with Accountability Citizenship

The indispensable supplement to any course on Government, Critical Thinking, Political Science or Composition

“The master virtues of our republic should be humility, tolerance..., and compromise.”

This book equips readers to analyze and understand divisive issues key to the 2022-2024 political cycles. Informed by concise overviews of the science of truth, history, behavioral psychology and current events, the author presents substantive discussions taken from his eight-year tour of duty on the front lines of America’s political blog wars. With appendices on critical reasoning and suggested answers to study questions, the text is an accessible, practical aid that students and teachers alike are sure to find a valuable addition to their curriculum.

Stephen Tryon is a former Assistant Professor at the United States Military Academy and Senate Fellow. His previous books include Accountability Citizenship (Xlibris 2013) and Thy King Dumb Come (2020). He lives in Salt Lake City, where he enjoys teaching, cooking and time with family.
