LEARNING FROM DAD.

Growing up my dad taught me a lot of things. He taught me good work ethic, to do things right the first time, and how to work smarter- not harder... though we worked hard too! Whether you had a dad or not, you probably have someone who has pushed you to be the best version of yourself. That influence has shaped you into the person you are today, and that is powerful. Use that as you look to the future. We can leave a lasting impression on those coming behind us- it's our duty and our responsibility to help them realize their full potential. Don't waste this opportunity.

Sammie George- BCDF Executive Director

Business Foundations for Father's Day

A column written by Joe Molineaux titled "My father's wisdom for life, business" speaks about the lessons he learned from his father. He shares his father's guidance, and highlights the following advice as ways to be a better person both in business and in life:

- Work hard and be rewarded.
- Follow directions.
- Always use the right tools.
- Collect what is owed to you.
- Stand up for what you believe in.
- Our name is the only thing that stays with us our entire life.
