

“knowingly or unknowingly!” II

Rev. James Lee

Last week, we shared a message encouraging reflection on the faults we unknowingly commit. But in truth, we are also living with countless blessings that quietly help us, often without our awareness. The very fact that we are able to live as we are today should be enough reason for gratitude.

The police we see are not just those who issue speeding tickets—they are also the reason we can live safely. A single police car stationed near a school makes people more cautious, helping children commute safely. Smooth and clean roads bring comfort to those who drive.

There are many things that trouble our hearts—unexpected car accidents, sudden illnesses, or unannounced flight delays. These events can cause discomfort, pain, and emotional distress. But if we think about it differently, there are people who labor to prevent such accidents, and even though they may be working for themselves, their efforts ultimately contribute to the comfort and well-being of others.

We live with the unseen help of others in ways we often don’t realize. People who come from smaller towns express so much joy simply at the presence of large Korean markets like H Mart and Asiana Market. They’re delighted just knowing there are Korean restaurants nearby. The gas stations at every corner and the abundance of shops bring a sense of comfort and ease to everyday life.

In truth, there is no such thing as “ordinary” or “given.” The comfort we experience in life often comes through the unseen efforts of others. May this week be one in which we grow thankful for the things we’ve taken for granted.
