...a deep, deep dive.
...an examination of all its elements, from development through to the finished article.
...a close close look at storytelling, and where the actor fits in.
...a reliable way to assess the entirety, as a means of finding one's own place and responsibility as a key mechanism in the storytelling.

Classes will be held both online and in person (NB. "in person" will remain a moving quantity; at no time will students be expected or required to meet in person in contravention of public health directives or their own health & safety).

Classwork will be comprehensive.
Subject areas and include: backstory, monologues, scenes, historical context, and other research assignments. Solo monologues and group-work (scenes, research) may also be assigned for analysis and character development, and a limited degree of technique. A considerable amount of independent & group work will be required. Students should be prepared to dedicate in excess of 3hrs/week, including screenings (of the film and of other assigned source material), in addition to classtime.

A NEW TAKE ON CLASS ENROLMENT:

on demand*
a session is launched when a cohort is full*
