

Mesmerizing Love

Your love was as mesmerizing as a meteorite

What I wasn't able to measure
Was the exact damage you intended to make
Once you'd hit my ground

Your damages are now deeply carved into my skin

These wounds will one day heal
But scars, you would have left

Your affection was once- like a shooting star
Now- it's gleamy, but with no actual magic

Your sincerity is like a solar eclipse
One of a kind-
Yet, with unseen and unknown risks

I fancied you, because the offer was mesmerizing
But you too- fancied me, because mine too- was mesmerizing

Our planets are no longer housed in the same universe
Our stars no longer align
Our eclipses no longer coincide

You caused an explosion when you hit my earthly ground

Yet- in the constellations, you- I want to find

I constantly see and feel the particles left behind

But I know- soon, I will find a new star in my humankind