

Friendship Fraud

There's an acquaintance
And there's a friend

You can't be friends with someone who demands you not be friends- with their foes yet, are friends- with your foes

It serves as never-ending gossip

You can't trust sharing a hardship
Because discretion and privacy are questioned
Then things just become odd

Though, you can- be respectful to an acquaintance from a distance

In an honest friendship
There's respect

You can't have loyalty to two different people who can't get along
You can't have integrity to offer true honesty to either one

In an honest friendship
There's equality

Just like you can't worship two Gods
You can't worship two earthly egos

I call it, friendship fraud
The stakes are high
Love will never multiply