Parental supervision and customer service center

"Tips for healthy participation of minors in online games"

With the popularity of the Internet among young people, it has become a common phenomenon for minors to access online games. In order to protect the healthy participation of minors in games, parents should also strengthen supervision and guidance under the premise that the government further strengthens industry management. To this end, we provide the following suggestions for minors to participate in online games:

1. Actively control game time. Games are just a supplement to study and life. You should actively participate in various offline activities and let your parents understand your behavior and experience in online games.
2. Do not participate in game settings that may take up a lot of time. Do not play large-scale role-playing games, and do not play games with PK settings. School students should not play games for more than 2 hours per week, and spend no more than 10 yuan per month on games.
3. Do not use games as spiritual sustenance. Especially when you encounter pressure and frustration in real life, you should communicate more with your family and friends, and don't rely solely on games to relieve stress.
4. Develop a positive and healthy gaming mentality. Overcome the psychology of comparison, showing off, hatred and revenge, and avoid forming bad online behavior habits such as bullying the weak and robbing others.
5. Pay attention to protecting personal information. Including personal family and friend identity information, home, school, unit address, phone number, etc., to prevent network traps and cybercrime.

"Parental Guardianship Application Process"

The parental guardianship system fully considers the actual needs of parents. When parents find that their children are too addicted to games, parents provide legal guardian qualification certificates, game name account, and parents' desire to limit the intensity of the information. Several restrictive measures can be taken for accounts in which children are addicted to games to solve the bad phenomenon of minors being addicted to online games, such as limiting the time interval and length of children playing games every day, or limiting games to weekends only, or completely prohibiting them.
