Introducing the CFTW Coach Certification Program®

At Creating Futures that Work®, we've developed a dynamic system that strengthens key leadership and innovation skills such as readiness to learn, cognitive agility, collaboration and problem solving.

We call it the ABEL (Arts-Based Experiential Learning) System.

Based on a decade of National Science Foundation-funded research, ABEL combines powerful arts-based experiential learning with unique instruments that measure and track skill mastery.

ABEL's effectiveness has been proven through successful use in Fortune 500's, educational institutions and non-profits. Now, we're excited to share our treasure trove of content and practical expertise.

We invite you to join us on a unique learning journey and become a

This program grows out of two deeply personal journeys.

A photograph of a winding asphalt road that curves through a hilly, green landscape. The road has a yellow double line on the left and a white line on the right. The hills are covered in grass and some trees, and the sky is overcast.

Harvey's journey began as a classically trained musician and moved toward the application of the arts in business and leadership.

Fred's journey began in business leadership and moved into the arts as a way to make a difference in the world.

Creating Futures That Work® grew out of the convergence of these two journeys.

Over the years, Harvey and Fred have developed a rich array of learning experiences, workshops and measurement instruments, bringing thousands of leaders and teams through transformative experiences of personal and professional growth.

*If you are a learner, vibrating with curiosity;
if you are committed to your personal growth and the growth of your clients;
if you are inspired by your own journey of self-discovery...*

...we invite you to join us on a journey of creative exploration.
