Celebrate history

Lovers of architecture and history can spend days exploring our city and the midcoast area. Bath has two national historic districts. The Bath Historic District is bounded roughly by Beacon Street to the north, High Street to the west, and the Kennebec River to the east, and includes Washington, High, and Middle Streets. It also includes our downtown shopping district, the recipient of a Great American Main Street award for its preservation efforts. The Trufant Historic District is bounded on the east by Washington Street, on the west by Middle Street, and on the north and south by Pine and Corliss Streets respectively. Both districts contain preserved and restored examples of Greek Revival, Victorian, and Aesthetic period housing. Many were built by wealthy families that settled in Bath during the days of wooden shipbuilding. Beautiful churches from the 1840s complete the city skyline. Sagadahoc Preservation Inc, the Bath Historical Society, and the History Room at the Patten Free Library are all wonderful resources for Bath's architectural heritage.

Oak Grove Cemetery

While exploring Bath, stop at any of the 34 oval historic markers that tell a story about the location's history, shipyards, shipping families, shipbuilders, industries, and mysteries. The markers are identified on the map below and can be viewed on the City's website at cityofbath.com.

For more maritime history, consider a guided walking tour or a trip to Maine's First Ship and the Maine Maritime Museum. Bath has a number of astonishingly beautif cemeteries worth a visit as well. Oak Grove Cemetery was designed in the late 1880s by noted Bath Landscaper and Park/Cemetery Superintendent, John H. Ramsay. The grounds are reminiscent of an Olmsted aesthetic, and many prominent family names, granite tombs, war memorials, and statuary can be viewed in the idyllic park setting. Maple Grove Cemetery has a monument to William King, Maine's First Governor. Trufant Burial Grounds, Sewall, Fairview, and Calvary cemeteries are also full of intrigue and are highly recommended.

Natural resources

No matter the season, Bath has something to offer the outdoor enthusiast. Migratory birds abound on the shores and rivers of this area. Bath is on the Atlantic Flyway, and Merrymeeting Bay has over 50 species of freshwater fish and ten species of anadromous fish such as the rare Atlantic salmon, shortnose Sturgeon, and Atlantic sturgeon. Bald eagles and osprey nests are easily spotted. If you visit in the warmer months, several outfits offer highly enjoyable Kennebec River tours. Visiting the midcoast in 2021 and 2022, the Steller's sea eagle attracted birders from across the globe to this area.

Miles of trails to enjoy

If not by water, wildlife is easily accessible from our historic downtown through an enormous series of walkable, hikeable, and bikeable trails maintained by the Kennebec Estuary Land Trust (KELT) and the City of Bath. These pathways connect the south end of the city to the north, weaving from downtown, through historic residential areas, schools, and recreational facilities. There are trails winding through many undeveloped parcels, which are treasured by locals and tourists alike. Among them are Thorne Head, Sewall Woods, Butler Head, Basin Preserve, and Lilly Pond Community Forest, which offer wildlife in their natural habitat and waterfront vistas.

Nearby beaches to explore

Within twenty minutes of Bath, you'll find thousands of acres of conserved land and preserves. Some notable spots to explore include:

- Head Beach and Morse Mountain in Phippsburg.
- Higgin's Mountain and Josephine Newman Audubon Sanctuary in Georgetown.
- Green Point Preserve, Hamilton Sanctuary,
- and Whiskeag Trail in West Bath. • Robert P. Tristram Wildflower Reservation in Woolwich.

Bath is a short drive away from some of the best beaches on the Eastern seaboard. Reid State Park in Georgetown and Popham Beach State Park in Phippsburg are two of the largest beaches in Maine, great for walking, swimming, and spending hours playing under the sun.
