The Holy Fathers of the 7th Ecumenical Council, commemorated today, condemned the heresy of iconoclasm. This heresy originated in the early 8th century, when the Emperor Leo III decreed that all holy icons be taken out of churches and homes and burned in the city squares. The decree was motivated by a false belief that the veneration of icons was a form of idolatry. During the reign of the pious Empress Irene, the veneration of icons was restored. Through the efforts of the Empress, backed by the Patriarch of Constantinople Tarasius, the 7th Ecumenical Council fully condemned the heresy of iconoclasm.
