NEW YORK, Apr 19, 2024 /Newswire/ --Broken Glass Filmworks announced today that it has partnered with Philanthropist Bert Wynn to create an Entertainment & Lifestyle VOD (Video-on Demand) streaming platform. The new platform will operate under the domain name www.brokenglassfilmworks.tv and their slogan is "This is the place where stars are born".

Despite the popularity of many streaming services, most content has remained the same as that on most of the major networks. Travis Charles Johnson, VP of Programming for the new site, stated "If you're looking for the next group of stars, here's where you'll find them" He says the universe will start small, however it will eventually house some of the best new talent worldwide. The site will be subscription and ad based and will stream feature/short films, tv series, podcast, live events, e-learning and more.

The partnership prides itself on its commitment to filmmakers and content creators. "We are creating our platform with filmmakers in mind and have taken great steps to insure that they are compensated well" said company Chairman Bert Wynn. The streaming site is scheduled to launch later this year and will kick off with the comedy series "He's A Jerk". Head of Film Acquisitions, Monaca Johnson, said "I'm truly looking forward to working with extremely talented people and making sure we can provide some well told stories to our subscribers".
