Getting the best results from large-format printing

Preferred

When it comes to file preparation for large-format printing, it is always better if you use vector graphics whenever possible. Vector graphics are not dependent on resolutions for overall quality and can be enlarged to the desired size without any concern for image quality.

Vector File Types .AI, .EPS, .PDF, .SVG

Acceptable

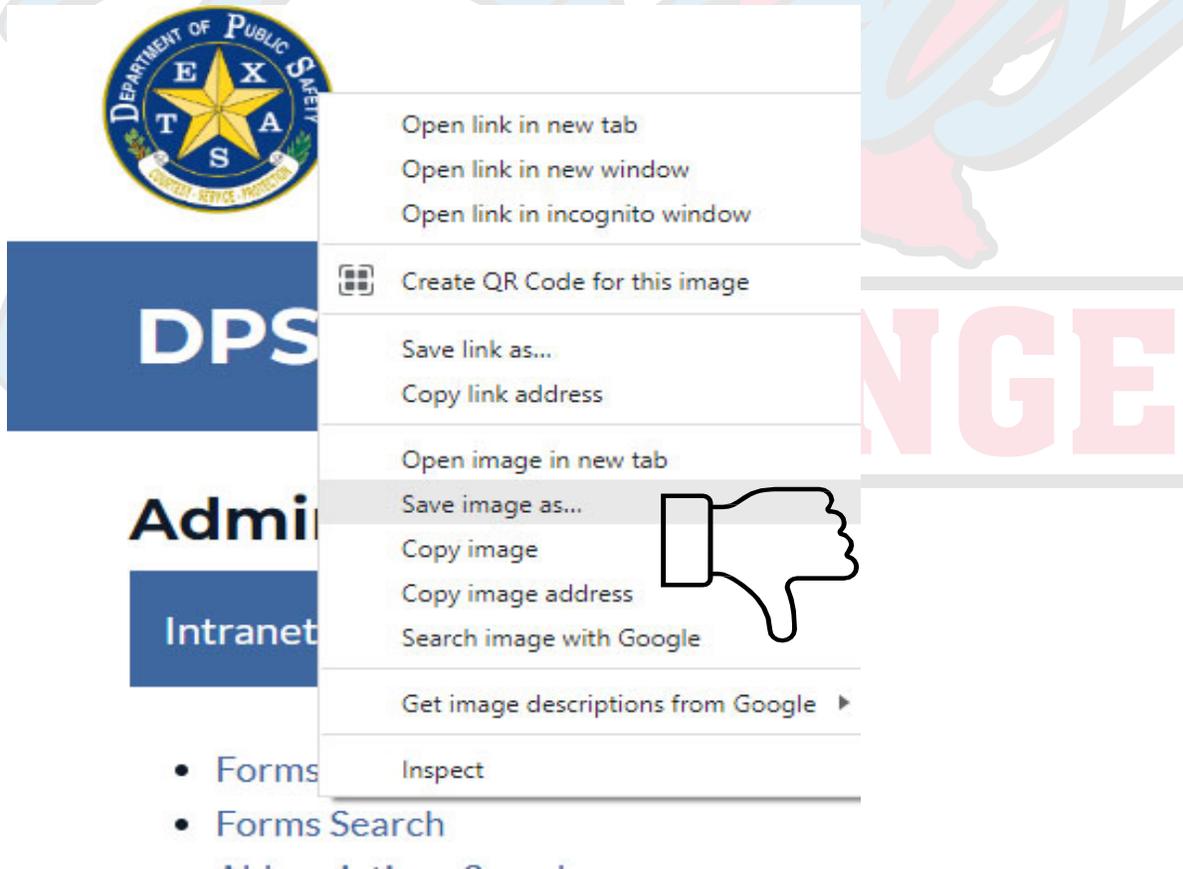

However, vector files are not always available, in that case, a high-quality raster image file can be used.

Most images and logos will look their best when an image of 150 DPI (dot per inch) at 100% of the size is supplied for printing

Raster File Types .JPG, .PNG, .TIF

Tip

In most cases, images that are pulled from a webpage or the internet will not be suitable for print production purposes.

Vector Files

Raster Files at least 150 DPI

Look for larger file sizes for the best quality
