

This is somewhat like comparing apples to oranges.. So these substitutions will be as close as I can get them but certainly not dead on. I chose the colours carefully so that they work well together but there will be significant differences in the end results.(but it will still look good)

As the Americana Acrylics are far more opaque than the fluid acrylics you will have to take care to thin them well in order to get the transparency , so I recommend using Jo Sonya Fast drying glaze with them so they do not lose their adhesion or too much colour.
