CORONAVIRUS: NGO embarks on relief intervention for Africa

In the wake of several challenges facing Africa today, including the global Coronavirus pandemic, a nongovernmental organisation, Africa International Food Bank and Disaster Relief (AFBADR) has said the organisation will be bringing food relief and other succor to the people of Africa.

The founder, AFBADR Sir Andrew Okokhere in a statement promised that the team has completed arrangements to supply relief materials and food to the affected areas across Africa and some parts of the world.

"The Africa international Food Bank and Disaster Relief (AFBADR) is an organization that was established in the State of Texas, USA with the main office in Badagry, Lagos, Nigeria. The organization was established to serve humanity through the provision of food and relief materials such as clothing, medicine and general assistance to cover the need of the hungry people in Africa.

"We have been in the forefront of this kind of project which started sometime ago in the United States during the hurricane and flood disaster. Beyond that, we deem it necessary to reach out to Africa in this turbulent period of war, ethnic wrangles and health challenges including the Coronavirus pandemic that has become a global affair."

Okokhere also disclosed that the organisation is a reputable NGO that has the backing of American government with the support of Nigerian traditional rulers like the Oba of Badagry and other traditional rulers across the
