

Chinese Buttonbush

Adina rubella

8'-10' tall, deciduous shrub grown for its glossy leaves and spike, round creamy-white flowers that appear in early to midsummer in abundance! The flowers give way to small brown fruit clusters several weeks later. Closely related to our native buttonbush (Cephalanthus occidentalis), but is finer-textured and a bit more compact. Plant in full sun to partial shade. Can tolerate both wet soils that experience periodic flooding & dry soils including dry shade. Flowers have a mild fragrance. A must for butterfly and bird gardens. Bees too!!
