

Mountain Pea

Orbexilum pedunculatum

Here is a unique, groundcover that is native to the southwestern U.S. It forms a dense mat of glossy green leaves that spread by short rhizomes –it would be good for stabilizing a sunny slope. The bluish-purple flower spikes occur May through July. The seeds are a nutritious treat for several species of birds. EVERGREEN!