

Dam B Wisteria

Wisteria frutescens 'Dam B'

This selection of Wisteria frutescens has been around for many years and is a promising candidate for the southern gardener wanting a less rambunctious vine with wisteria-like charm. Found by legendary plant hunter Lynn Lowrey near the dam of a lake in southeast Texas named Dam B. It sports light blue/lavender, finely scented, pendulous flowers in 4"-6" long racemes. Enjoys a heavy flowering season in late May and June. It will also bloom sporadically throughout the summer into the fall. Deciduous.
