

Everyone can make a difference

Everyone can practice the low-carbon and environmental lifestyle

Everyone can reduce unnecessary consumption and waste

Everyone can express their love and passion for nature through art

Everyone can play a vital role in global warming and the protection of endangered species

Back in 2021, we kicked off the Nature and Art Global Art Competition to protect our planet. With help from over 100 amazing people and support from UNESCO, we used art to inspire action for climate change and biodiversity.

Now we're ready to do even more—will you help us make it happen ?

Join 20,000 Young Artists in Protecting Our Planet

This global art competition is more than just an event—it's a movement. Over 20,000 children from around the world are using their creativity to shine a light on the urgent threats to our planet's biodiversity: disappearing ecosystems, destructive human activities, and unsustainable consumption.

Every artwork is a voice for change. By supporting this initiative, you're helping turn their creativity into action—raising awareness, inspiring solutions, and building a future where nature thrives.

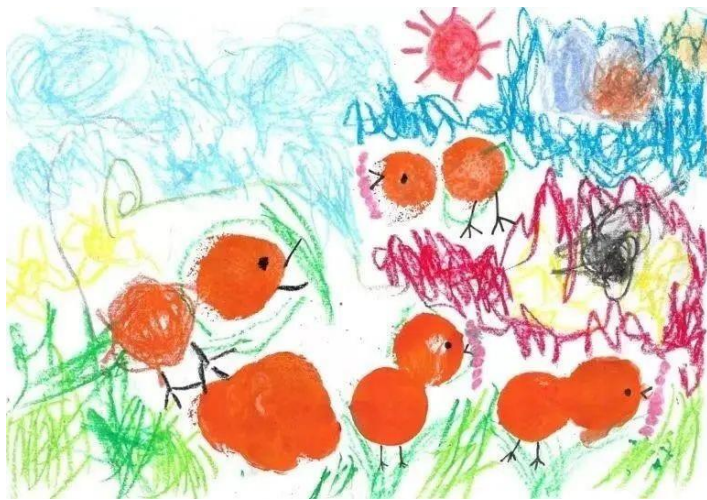

This collection features artworks from 3–72-year-old artists worldwide. From over 20,000 submissions, 6,000 were selected by a panel of art teachers, professors, curators, and artists for the 2021 Nature and Art – Global Art Competition to Support Biodiversity.

These works may not all be technically perfect, but their true value lies in their heartfelt emotion, instinct, and creativity. They reveal both the despair of species facing extinction and the hope of people embracing low-carbon living. Art here is more than beauty—it's a force for awareness, thought, and change.
