Wednesday

February 4

3:00 – 5:00 pm

Sharing the outdoor world, either through photography, or in person through photo tours and workshops is why Ron Niebrugge loves photography.

Ron will talk about the techniques and strategies he uses to combine his two passions, landscape photography, and wildlife photography. The results are images different than the typical wildlife images created with long telephoto lenses. Not only can these techniques make your images unique, but it doesn't require big expensive lenses, these concepts can even be applied to a cell phone camera!

Ron's images have caught the attention of many and some of his clients include National Geographic, Sports Illustrated, Walt Disney World, Smithsonian, National Park Service, US Forest Service, Sony, Ford and Holland America.

Ron's images have appeared in many books and publications including Sunset, Alaska Magazine, Audubon, Sierra Club Calendars, Country and Fortune Magazine to name a few. Several years ago Ron decided he wanted to share his passion of photography with others and began offering photo tours and workshops. Over the years this has evolved and Ron now offers tours throughout the US and guides tours for others internationally.
