~~Maybe~~ Definitely

Potential. We all have it. It's a journey from good to great.
From ordinary to extraordinary. From competitor to champion.

It's a difficult road and even the bravest will falter.

We've worked with those who have made it. Those who have reached the pinnacle of performance. They too have been lost. And hurt.
They have tasted both fear and failure. They have learned to overcome.

If you want to help your people realise their potential, speak to those who know what it really takes.

International Elite 100 Awards was established with the prime objective of honouring the achievements pertaining to global talent, across all areas of business, no matter the size.

Our award is structured to showcase the extraordinary power to lead from the front and honour all those who strive harder to achieve quality.

The merit-driven process, ensures that any successful candidates nominated for our award can be assured that their accolades are truly deserved whilst also offering the opportunity to expand on their achievement further via our global magazine's circulation.

No matter the type of recognition, giving and receiving them builds connections. Conversely, a lack of recognition diminishes connection. Based on our awards recognition experiment, failing to recognise a colleague for great work results in the lowest chances of future connection and support, whereas higher levels of recognition lead to better opportunities for connection and support.

To ensure great work gets appreciated as it happens, recognition should be a constant, integrated element of an organisation's culture. To be truly integrated, recognition must be personalised, part of the daily employee experience, and celebrate a variety of achievements.

If recognition is an integrated part of the natural flow of business, it's far more likely to be given in a timely manner when it will have the greatest impact. When leaders and peers frequently show appreciation for employee contributions, there are a myriad of opportunities for employees to feel connected to each other, to the organisation's purpose, and to success.

Through our merit-driven process, we look to ensure that any successful candidates in our awards can be assured that their accolades are truly deserved whilst also offering the opportunity to expand the achievement further to International Elite 100's highly engaged circulation and regular web traffic.

Delta Controls

Commercial Building Automation Systems Provider of The Year - Global

Innovative solutions in building automation

Automation is transforming every part of our society, and nowhere is this clearer than in the way we are using buildings.

No matter where you are in the world, you can find Delta Controls products. With partners and distributors in every marketplace, their work stands at the forefront of the Building Automation Systems industry. As more and more people turn to explore the possibilities of BAS, they find a willing and innovative partner in this talented team.

The core of Delta Controls can be found in its dependable and user-friendly building controls automation solutions in the commercial, healthcare, hospitality, education and leisure markets. Delta Controls' firm belief is that efficient, environmentally-conscious and effective building automation is key for a global sustainable future. Much of their work, therefore, has been designing innovative solutions that have been a major part of the industry for over thirty-five years.

The growth of this sector, and the adaptability of Delta Controls, can be seen in their impressively quick response to the COVID-19 pandemic. Problem-solvers at heart, the team has leapt forward in creating safe working environments for employees and the community at large. The team's award winning O3 product offering is the perfect example of this innovation, as it is able to identify areas of least occupancy using noise and motion detection. The system is then able to track which rooms have been occupied in order to preserve three-day isolation periods as well as letting people know when to clean again. Not just winning awards with Corporate Vision, the O3 was awarded the AHR Expo Innovation Award in the Building Automation category for its unique and imaginative approach to unprecedented challenges.

Operating around the world presents unique challenges to the Delta Controls team.

Each of their products must be adapted to suit not only the safety standards of its origin country, but the specific needs of each region of distribution. To achieve success in this respect, they foster close ties with their distributors and with various market leaders who use their services. As an international operation, it has been vital to develop a culture of diversity and inclusivity, namely one which celebrates the differences between us and the similarities that make us stronger. It's the diversity of thought that keeps ingenuity flowing at Delta Controls.

By working collaboratively in this manner, the company is able to gather an immense amount of data about various regions and the challenges they face. This information is applied to the developments of new products and lies at the heart of the developmental DNA that has kept Delta Controls ahead of the competition. The team works tirelessly to ensure that their propositions are tested in the field, with partners able to access a beta program to see what might be coming next. The company also hosts Global Conferences, allowing attendees to speak directly to leadership and developers.

The strong relationships that the team fosters have allowed them to develop products that meet the unique needs of their clientele across numerous markets.

The world of building automation is one which will have an enormous impact on us all, and the team at Delta Controls are setting the standards by which we should all expect it to operate.

Their approach is collaborative, inclusive and diverse, making their products adaptable and able to provide real-world solutions to real-world problems. It's a credit to the team and their hard work that the firm continues to achieve such a high rate of success. ■

Homenet Zambia

Sales & Lettings Agency of the Year – Zambia

Invest in a beautiful country

It would be fair to say that Homenet Zambia has overcome more challenges than most on the global real estate landscape.

As the name suggests, Homenet Zambia is based in the country of Zambia, home to some 16 million people over 753,000sqkm. Landlocked and surrounded by Zimbabwe, Malawi, DR Congo, Tanzania, Namibia, Botswana and Angola, Zambia is renowned for the Victoria Falls and Batoka Gorge – the latter being particularly famous for its nesting of the Taita Falcon.

It's against the backdrop of this beautiful country that Janet Irwin opened Homenet Zambia, after a 25-year ban on real estate had been lifted. Today, it has been established for almost 30 years, and has curated a peerless reputation on the market – mostly on the back of Janet's exceptional expertise when it comes to Zambia's real estate market.

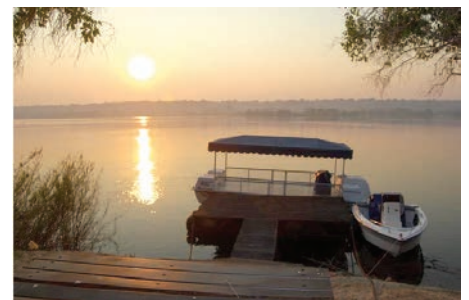

To this point, Zambia is predominately a rental market, and the company has built a large portfolio covering commercial/retail and residential sales plus farms, tourism lodges, sites and land across the country.

Janet specialises in tourism lodges and sites around the country from Livingstone on the banks of the Zambezi - home of the mighty Victoria falls - to the famous Luangwa valley, Lower Zambezi National Park and Kafue National Park. Janet takes a moment to comment on the current real estate climate and the larger economy: "We have seen significant increase in interest from Investors since President Hakainde Hichilema (HH) was elected and the country is definitely feeling positive results even in these early days. With the copper price currently up, and COVID figures extremely low, it is definitely a time to be looking at investment in a country with so much to offer. A beautiful country, very warm-hearted people, a Christian and peaceful nation."

It is certainly true that Zambia has much to offer. From national parks – rich with wildlife – to world-class landscapes and vistas, Homenet Zambia has capitalised on its offerings to build a best-in-class reputation on the larger African market.

One of the stand-out properties in Homenet Zambia's portfolio is: Chibembe Wildlife Estate. 850 acres of natural African bush directly opposite Luangwa National Park with 3km of river frontage on the Luangwa River. This is where the first walking safari took place and was introduced by the well known Philanthropist. This is also where David Livingstone crossed the Luangwa River in 1866.

On the banks of the mighty Zambezi River, three hours from Livingstone, close to Sioma National Park, not far from the Namibian border and approx. three hours from Liuwa plains and Kafue National Park is the Barotseland gem. 16.5 acres of two historical homes and cottages sitting in all its splendour on the banks of the Zambezi. This unique place has the largest private library of Zambia and Northern Rhodesia's history. ■

ClearPath Orthodontics

Orthodontic Aligner Solutions Provider of The Year - Pakistan

Pioneering dentistry from ClearPath

ClearPath Orthodontics was established 14 years ago with the vision of introducing cutting-edge patented orthodontic technology to manufacture clear aligners in Pakistan, thus creating job opportunities and contributing to the economic growth of the country. Following the company's well-deserved success in the programme, we took a closer look at ClearPath's history of success and work.

ClearPath Orthodontics is working in the field of aligner technology, with focus on 3D CAD/CAM printing, learning and development, education, import, export and consultancy services in both public and private sectors. Additionally, it is the only US FDA-approved aligner manufacturing company in Pakistan with several international certifications, including treating more than 150,000 cases globally.

Dr Waqas Wahab

The differentiating point it holds as a company is that ClearPath is the only US FDA-approved brand in Pakistan which is prestigious and trusted by doctors universally. Additionally, ClearPath's unique selling point is that it has professional dentists and orthodontists trained in diagnosis and treatment planning of malocclusion of teeth.

Moreover, the material that it uses for its aligners is exceptionally hygienic and comfortable as it does not stain or darken with treatment. ClearPath has the largest aligner manufacturing facility in the region and has a CP-smart software system that keeps track of all the records and treatment plans. Currently, there are very few aligner manufacturing companies in Pakistan. However, the team of ClearPath Orthodontics is the pioneer of aligner manufacturing in this respective region.

Unlike most businesses, the Covid-19 pandemic had a positive impact on ClearPath's business.

It highlighted the importance of minimal touch orthodontics. In addition, the use and awareness of clear aligners enhanced due to less clinical exposure of the patients minimizing the spread of infection.

Additionally, with new technologies emerging every day, staying on top of the latest trends is critical and of prime importance for business development. Today, businesses have only two choices. Either keep abreast with technology in the respective industries or lose out to competitors that offer better and newer resolutions to the clients. ClearPath has enhanced its expertise with the latest advancements in Research and Development. ClearPath can certainly prepare its business for changing customer demands. Also, it increases its relevancy within the industry, ultimately setting it apart from the competition by helping in attracting and retaining top talent.

The key to ClearPath's success as an organisation is its culture which is based on a firm and widely shared set of beliefs supported by strategy and structure. Our employees know precisely how the top management desires them to respond to any/all situations. ClearPath's employers have a vital role in perpetuating a firm culture, starting with recruiting and selecting applicants who will share the organisation's beliefs and thrive in that culture.

Employees accomplish this by developing orientation, training, and performance management programmes that outline plus reinforce the organisation's core values. Leaders within the company live up to its culture every day and go out of their way to express their cultural identities to their employees and prospective new hires. They are clear about their values and know how those values define their organisation and determine how the organisation runs.

Currently, ClearPath has multiple projects in the pipeline, such as a purpose-built Dental Hospital and Research Centre related to dentistry, with a state-of-the-art head office introducing the latest technologies based on trends and research in modern dentistry.

Overall, introducing 3D system-based supplies with smart-software technologies is ClearPath's main objective for the future and it hopes to continue innovating its processes and making orthodontic treatment affordable to the masses by bringing revolutionary changes in the field of dentistry. ■

The company has invested the last six decades in bringing innovation, quality, and cost-saving solutions to a diverse range of projects worldwide, including single homes, apartment buildings, hotels, hospitals, industrial plants, and more. We find out about the firm following its win in the International Elite 100 award.

Since its establishment, Chromagen has continuously expanded and established two subsidiaries in Australia and Spain, as well as a solid network of distributors in more than thirty five countries around the world.

Chromagen is positioned and recognized as a pioneer of hot water energy-saving solutions in the world, built on core values of reliability, efficiency, expertise, and quality. It is a firm that offers uncompromising service to its customers. The Israeli market in particular is a mature solar water heating market, which is an advantage for a firm such as Chromagen. Israel is also one of the largest solar markets in the world, per population. 2022 may have been a challenging year for many people, but it was a good business year for Chromagen.

Many people were choosing to stay at home, showering and bathing. As a result, people were active to replace old systems with new ones that could save energy and heat water without doing damage to the environment.

That has long been the vision of Chromagen; to promote innovative hot water heating solutions that use clean energy and encourage environmental sustainability. Chromagen takes enormous pride in its Project Department, especially for providing complete solar water heating solutions that are individually handled by company engineers. This department analyses project data, drafts preliminary design and ROI calculations, quotations, detailed engineering planning, installation, supervision, and post sales technical support. It is not just the Project Department that excels, however.

Momentum Group

The best process of developing senior leaders with coaching and mentoring skills based on the N.E.W.S.® model Momentum Group is a leading organizational development company in Israel and represents top international training companies.

CASE STUDY: Global Internal Coaching in Sapiens

Momentum Group implements a cross-organizational internal coaching and mentoring program where senior managers coached other managers in various units across Israel, Europe, India and USA. The advantages of this internal coaching include:

- Creating a culture of a learning organization
- The internal coaches have in depth knowledge of the organization, culture and processes
- The coach acts as a role model for other managers
- It is more cost effective than hiring external coaches

The process of developing senior managers creates an extremely positive impact on several levels.

Those who participate in the program receive advanced and in depth tools to develop their coaching skills individually. The organization expresses trust and appreciation for their managerial abilities and contributes to the development of the mid-level managers.

Senior manager in Sapiens said: "We have invested in our managers, globally, through a in depth and structured method in all four continents where Sapience works. This helped us to create a unified management language based on the N.E.W.S.® model at the global level, This followed other N.E.W.S.® programs that are rooted in our management. This is the creation of a long-term internal coaching system. The positive echoes have already created waiting lists of managers that want to be coached all over the Sapiens sites."

One senior manager commented: "The N.E.W.S.® coaching program is one of the best management programs I have been through, in my management career of over two decades. I gained significant management tools for me as a coach, which I apply regularly in my working with my team. I even 'practice' some of the techniques I learned with my family members." ■

Best in Bespoke Itineraries of the Year - UK

Turas, which means 'journey' or 'tour' in Gaelic, was begun in 2017 by Scott Sutherland who had a vision to create tailor-made trips for discerning travellers in search of an authentic holiday experience.

Scott lives in the Scottish Highlands and has a passion for hospitality and tourism. He trained and worked in a number of luxury hotels throughout Scotland before establishing from scratch, the award-winning, five star Loch Ness Lodge which he ran for ten years offering fine hospitality to travellers from all over the globe and hosting unique weddings and house parties. Scott has built up an understanding of what visitors are looking for and his maxim has always been to go the extra mile to provide an exceptional guest experience. He brings that same dedication, enthusiasm, attention to detail and personal touch to Turas.

In 2018 Scott took over the Scotland Made Easy, Ireland Made Easy and France Made Easy travel consultancy from Marie Cruickshank and so combined Turas with Marie's well established itinerary planning business.

At Turas we craft bespoke self-drive holiday itineraries, with accommodation, which take you off the beaten track and let you have the vacation of your dreams!

We listen to what it is you'd like to get from your trip and then we design a bespoke itinerary for you. You might be looking for wild walks on windswept beaches; a brush with history as you explore ancient castles and standing stones; a round of golf on a championship course; a whisky tasting at your favourite distillery; exhilarating wildlife watching experiences; or perhaps you want to appreciate majestic scenery in style, sampling luxury accommodation and fabulous dining along the way. Just let us know and we'll plan and personalise the perfect trip for you.

We have a wealth of local knowledge from fabulous little art gallery cafés tucked away in scenic spots, to lesser known country lanes with spectacular views around every corner. And of course we have a range of wonderful accommodation from grand country houses and historic castles to boutique city centre hotels and charming B&Bs.

And if you'd rather sit back, relax and leave the driving to someone else while you're on holiday, we can arrange that too - either for your whole trip or for a daytime excursion.

Whether it's for a honeymoon, special celebration, a well-earned holiday escape or for a short break at the end of a conference, a Turas travel experience is crafted to your unique requirements, ensuring you leave with the very best of your chosen destination woven into your memories for a lifetime. That's the art of travel. ■

Coeval

LED Hazard Warning Systems Supplier of The Year - UK

Intelligent illumination

Coeval is a UK-wide specialist provider of robust, LED road sign based systems that advise, inform, educate and protect communities which helps create a safer environment.

Coeval delivers infrastructure technology that advises and informs users to help create a safer environment for us all. They do this through various intelligent radio-linked LED road signs and systems that provide clear, reliable, and flexible messaging, data, and connectivity to feed more comprehensive highway information control systems.

The company offers a wide range of technical solutions from speed, hazard and safety to parking, and overheight issues. These can be supplied as new units or adapted to make use of existing street furniture to meet individual customer needs.

Coeval has a powerful range of products for which they either have sole distribution rights or we own the technology.

CEO Gary Higgins explained: "We use the latest LED technology, and renewable energy such as solar and wind power - which are of great importance in today's environmentally concerned world. We have won the 'Variable Message Sign Company of the Year' four times in a row. We keep being told our signs are the best in the UK, and you can't get better than that."

Speed Indicator Signs

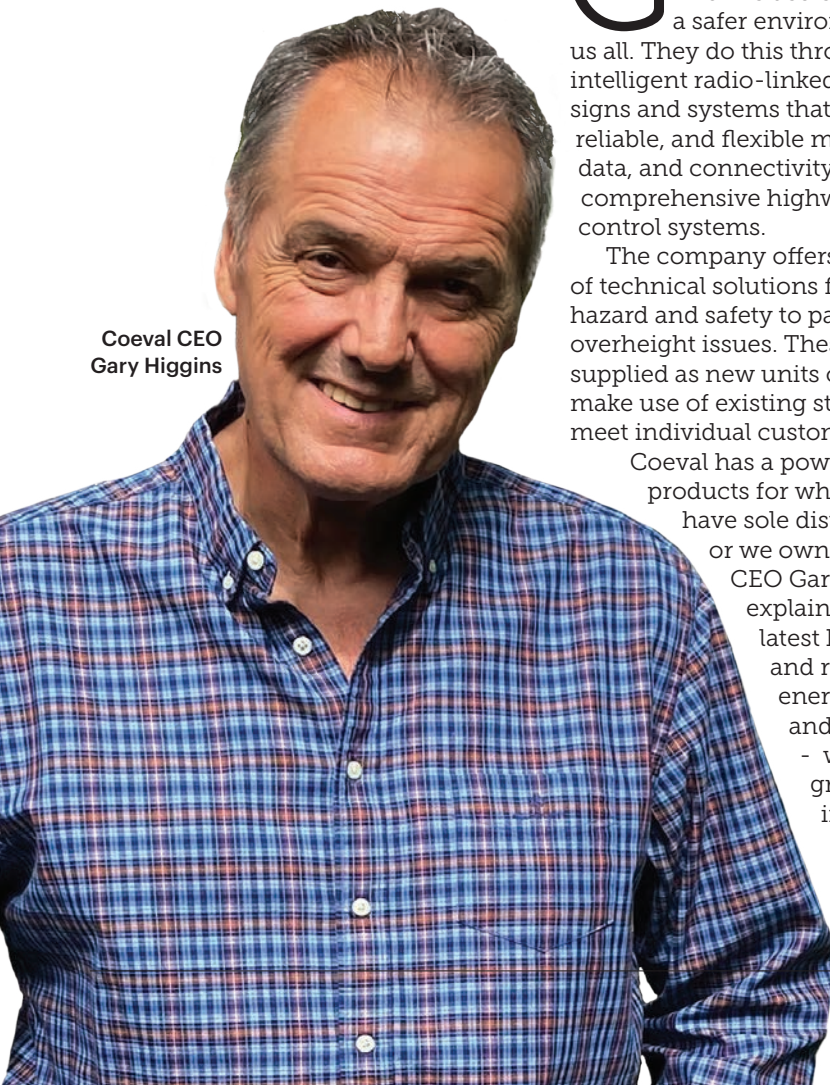

Arriva UK Bus approached Coeval to help improve safety around their Luton depot. With large vehicles moving about and engineering operations underway, drivers needed to be aware of their speed and keep to the 5mph speed limit - to protect people on site. Arriva wanted something that would alert drivers of any vehicles on the site to their speed limit and influence their behaviour to slow down.

Coeval proposed using their Speed Indicator Signs (SIDs), one in each direction, to highlight the speed drivers were travelling at and let them know if it complied to the site speed limit. A speed of less than 5mph shows in green; above the limit shows in red.

LED signs are more easily noticed by drivers than static signs and are visible in all conditions, including night time.

These vehicle-activated signs are robust, with high-power LEDs that can be seen clearly even in inclement weather. "With our optional Cloud

Control application for remote monitoring and data provision, users can learn more about driver behaviour in the area of the sign installation,” adds Gary.

These signs were quick and easy to install, meaning minimal disruption to the bus depot. Once installed, they immediately raised awareness to drivers’ speeds and improved the safety on site. Drivers recognised when they needed to slow down.

Over-height Vehicle Detection System

A bridge crossing the A81 at Balfron Station carries water pipes that are used to service the North of Glasgow and is a crucial piece of infrastructure that needs to be protected from issues such as bridge strikes.

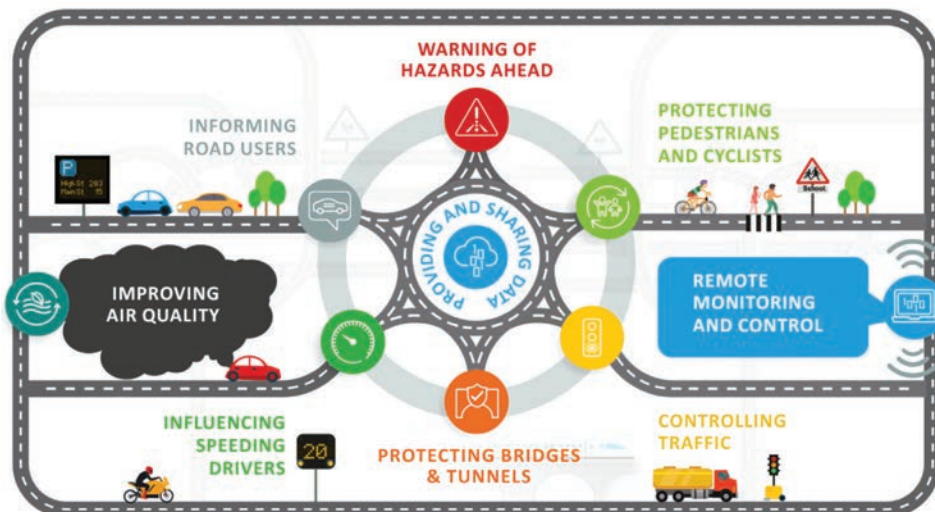

Having previously been struck by high vehicles, Scottish Water implemented a protection project that included reinforcing the bridge structure and deploying our Over-height Vehicle Detection System (OVD).

The Coeval OVD systems were installed to provide advance warning to high-sided vehicles approaching the bridge. This allowed vehicles to take an alternative route to avoid striking the bridge and potentially damaging the water pipes as well as the structure itself.

Coeval carried out a full turnkey installation project, including civil works to enable four OVD systems with three OVD message signs to inform and advise the drivers of over-height vehicles. The implementation of Over-height Vehicle Detection formed a key part of this bridge protection project - preventing damage to the structure and vehicles involved as well as preventing delays on the A81 route. The use of the signs to re-route tall vehicles ensured large HGV traffic continued on main arterial routes and not through small communities.

Cloud Control System

Poor air quality is a big environmental threat to health in the UK, with up to 36,000 deaths yearly attributed to long-term exposure (Public Health England, March 2019). The Environment Audit Committee has estimated that total health costs due to air pollution range between £8.5 billion and £20.2 billion a year. Utilising intelligent signage to influence driver behaviour and increase the attractiveness of active travel (walking and cycling) by improving safety and comfort can support the improvement in air quality.

Coeval have supplied various solutions from parking / route guidance to Over-height Vehicle Detection (OVD) and Hazard Warning, all of which help reduce congestion and, in turn, reduce air pollution. They have also recently supplied LED message signs for the Birmingham Clean Air Zone (CAZ).

Coeval’s fixed and mobile solutions support the development and increased use of active travel infrastructure – more cycling and walking benefits the environment and health and wellbeing. With the implementation of air quality sensors, they can publish air quality levels on their intelligent signage to help raise awareness and encourage changes in behaviour.

Coeval’s partnership with EarthSense, a supplier of air quality monitoring systems, allows them to support local authorities with their aim to improve air quality. This comes at a time when many councils are launching Clean Air Zones (CAZ) or investing significantly in low emission projects and active travel. Local authorities and other road operators are turning to technology to identify and assess areas and causes of poor air quality before taking appropriate action to improve it.

As part of this partnership, the Coeval supplied Cloud Control System directly interfaces with the EarthSense Zephyr® air quality monitor taking the real-time pollution data to set predefined messages on the Coeval LED message signs, without the need for manual intervention. The Zephyr® data is categorised into seven levels, providing an air quality index that can trigger the appropriate messages on the message signs, for example identifying diversion routes, to avoid high levels of air pollution. ■

Gutenberg Grafische Machines B.V.

Environmentally Friendly Packaging & Converting Machinery Provider of the Year - Europe

Leading by example

The climate crisis is perhaps the biggest challenge facing humanity at the present, with the startling impact seemingly unstoppable. The team at Gutenberg Grafische machines B.V. believe that industries must change how they work to make the biggest possible impact, and have decided to lead by example. We look at the impressive work which has seen them achieve such success.

It's not enough, nowadays, to create a product that has no consideration for environmental concerns. As consumers have become more aware of the impact their way of living has on the environment, they have changed the way in which they purchase. The team at Gutenberg Grafische Machines have made it their mission to help customers meet their sustainability goals, while performing to the highest possible standards.

The challenge of facing climate change is one which requires an approach which is entirely alien to how many industries operate. Instead of acting alone, organisations are being forced to consider their supply chains, developing deep partnerships that can lead to truly innovative solutions. As a key part of the supply chain for industries that are looking to become more environmentally friendly, the work of Gutenberg Grafische Machines is vital.

The team are making a real difference to the manufacturing landscape, offering a range of equipment that combines the latest technologies with environmentally responsible solutions. Whether it's a printing press, a die cutting machine or a bag packer, the team's incredible expertise and discernment allows them to deliver a seamless service that takes the form of a turnkey solution. They analyse the needs of the individual and make their recommendations based on that detailed knowledge.

As a result of this comprehensive examination, the Gutenberg Grafische Machines team can reinforce a new mindset when it comes to production and consumption across a range of industries. Their products mitigate many of the risks of various biological and physical components threatening the environment we share as a species, as they are specifically designed to minimize all harmful toxins in the air, agriculture, soil, biosystem, and ecosystem. From the firm's inception, this careful degree of care has been at the heart of how GutenbergGrafische Machines has operated.

Needless to say, the COVID-19 pandemic forced many challenges, and the uncertainty that industry had to react to was perhaps the largest for the Gutenberg Grafische Machines team. While many slowed down, the team ensured that their operations were maintained as far as possible while adapting to an entirely new way of working. This included offering new employee training on updated work styles, shifting processes to include more remote opportunities, and monitoring a constant risk assessment so that any changes could be made quickly.

The team's quick action saw the firm grow by 2.8% in Q1 2021 compared to the same quarter the previous year. Far from a crisis which the team were unable to react to, the pandemic demonstrated the value of a quick thinking and proactive team. This has transformed the way in which the business works, opening the door to new projects and partnerships which will reinforce the Gutenberg Grafische Machines mission. As 2023 looms into view, the firm aims to reduce CO2 emissions by 1,380,000 tons through their work, as well as planting 10,000 trees through global partnerships. The team are also exploring ways of reducing their carbon footprint and replacing the plastics used in their processes with eco-friendly materials.

Needless to say, the mission that drives the Gutenberg Grafische Machines team forward has proven to be key to their success. It guides many of their best decisions, opening the door to a brave new approach that puts our world first and foremost at all times. ■

Leading Innovators in Light-Sport Aircraft Design - USA

The sky's the limit

Having developed a modular and highly effective flight machine that is fast becoming the goto solution for military operations, border patrol, and private hire, SkyRunner LLC has made itself a mainstay of modern flight solutions.

Adventurous, flexible, and adaptive, the SkyRunner MK 3.2 was born out of the spirit of exploration, and has fast become a new and brilliant way to approach saving lives in the most difficult terrains thanks to its manoeuvrability and top-of-the-range technological elements. Soon, it looks forward to adding the advancing field of EVTOL technologies into this mix, monitoring pending FAA Rule changes that could even open up the field of Special Light Sport Category

Aircraft for more commercial use.

SkyRunner LLC, a privately held aircraft manufacturing company, has been making a name for itself since its inception for its continuous innovation, tenacity, and dedication towards its clients and the wider industry. Fundamentally, this company believes in making itself a front-runner for modern flight technology in order to help shape the future of aerospace travel in the long run, something that has endeared it greatly to its peers and to the market segment it wishes to serve as it designs and manufactures exemplary MK 3.2 crafts. These outstanding examples of contemporary flight technology, in essence, have been created for the civilian and military markets; due to the resilience, reliability, and adaptable design, the MK 3.2 is suitable for all manner of clientele and job, and has thusly become a new favourite sight amongst the USA's flight enthusiasts.

SkyRunner LLC, a privately held aircraft manufacturing company, has been making a name for itself since its inception for its continuous innovation, tenacity, and dedication towards its clients and the wider industry.

Innovative

In essence, the MK 3.2 is a light sports craft that was created by SkyRunner under the expert guidance of Stewart Hamel. Having earned SkyRunner S-LSA FAA certification in June of 2016, and full approval as a two-occupant aircraft in July of 2017, all completed whilst operating out of its home base in Shreveport, LA. The region proved the perfect answer to what SkyRunner needed and still need from a HQ as the city houses many of its peers and a sizable flight ecosystem from the private jet hire companies to big airports such as LAX. Moreover, SkyRunner has been continually pushing for more innovations since receiving this 2017 accreditation, and nowadays it is able to offer public use aircraft that will have the option of three seats.

Today – in a trend that will not be slowing down anytime soon – SkyRunner is one of the fastest growing aircraft manufacturers in the world based on class and on category, an accolade that has helped it to gain significant notoriety in its market segment as it keeps up with developments and updates with ease and sophistication.

Furthermore, the drive for adventure and excitement that fuelled the founder's passion in starting SkyRunner is still a core element.

Forging the beating heart of the business, Stewart Hamel's love of flight and aircraft was enhanced by his desire to be able to share the world of aviation with his kids, excited to build an aircraft that would facilitate this adventurous spirit and ensure that he and his family could forge memories that would last a lifetime.

However, this expanded past just a desire to provide this for his own family within short order. After Hamel read the Naval Postgraduate School Master's Thesis that laid out the challenges faced by special operators, rescue forces, and battlefield air technicians, he began to get ideas regarding how his adventure-driven and highly mobile aircraft idea could be applied to resolve some of these problems. In essence, he saw how the MK 3.2 could provide an agile and easily manoeuvrable new craft for first responders, crisis workers, and the military, making the trickier jobs faster and easier for the operators and, effectively, saving lives.

After this pivot, SkyRunner saw a boom in interest as it has become appealing to a much wider market segment, and it quickly found itself in high demand as it focused on growth and expansion to keep itself to scale with this growing customer base; this growth is what spurred on the hiring of Lieutenant Colonel Michael Jensen as SkyRunner's CSO. Over his time in this role, this innovative and entrepreneurially minded individual has been a Keynotes speaker for several conferences, been featured in the Special Operations

Aerial Mobility Vehicle Training Syllabus, and led multiple large, multifunctional organizations. Furthermore, he has secured a vast range of valuable relationships and business partnerships for SkyRunner amongst senior-level stakeholders and aviation professionals. With more than 20 years of experience in the US air force, his experience, organizational skills, management abilities, and dedication to due process has ensured that SkyRunner remains second to none.

No other Utility Transport Vehicle like it currently exists on the market. This unique nature is made clear from the very moment a client lays eyes on the plane itself, and even more so when actually handling the thing. Its landing gear is smooth and highly controllable, with a rugged, custom-tuned Fox Shocks turn through terrain that allows for a smooth landing every time and an expert handling of multiple terrains. Additionally, it contains a powerful 1000cc Polaris Pro-Star engine that propels the SkyRunner planes up to 70 MPH.

Outstanding performance

It even boasts a turbo-charged, fuel-injected Rotax flight motor that can lift two passenger up to 10,000 feet in the air – a limit which is less designated by the abilities of the craft, but more the altitude limited by the Federal Aviation Administration. The design of it to be 'rough and ready' for rugged off roading makes for outstanding performance across extreme terrains; in fact, offering comfort in extreme conditions is something about the SkyRunner MK 3.2 that has made it a darling of its industry, with a reliable and easily serviceable craft that can adapt to all manner of flights.

The MK 3.2 is suitable for all manner of clientele and job, and has thusly

flight enthusiasts

Additionally, a client can become a light-sport pilot after only 12 hours of flight. With no need for the hassle of airports, flying one of SkyRunner's exemplary planes is easy and stress-free without losing out on safety, opening up 98% of the sky that is open to light sport aircraft in and around the LA airspace. It's 'one machine, more choice, more freedom' motto has truly been put to work in uniting the USA's flight fanatics, enthusiasts, and professionals, and allow them to connect over the MK 3.2. Furthermore, within the vehicle itself, the communication between everyone inside and the controllers outside is crystal clear thanks to its INIVSIO intercom system, providing back and forth capabilities with any military or law enforcement radio system.

Fast-growing

Today – in a trend that will not be slowing down anytime soon – SkyRunner is one of the fastest growing aircraft manufacturers in the world based on class and on category, an accolade that has helped it to gain significant notoriety in its market segment as it keeps up with developments and updates with ease and sophistication.

Furthermore, the drive for adventure and excitement that fuelled the founder's passion in starting SkyRunner is still a core element.

This craft also thinks ahead in terms of pilot visibility. Using the in-built Tomar commercial-quality light-bars, SkyRunner allows its clients and pilots to get a great idea of the terrain ahead of them, lighting the way in either the visible or infra-red spectrum depending on the pilot's choice. Fundamentally, with such world-class elements coming together to form one craft, this machine has secured a front-running position in the market like no other. Its clients from the private to the military appreciate each and every thought that has gone into it, and from the tiniest detail to the most impressive feature, SkyRunner has undergone comprehensive and diligent machine testing time and time again so that it can ensure each of its vehicles are in perfect working order.

This, critically, is all part of its dedication to client safety and wellbeing. Having been inspired by the training manuals and needs of rescue services and soldiers it knows that the security of the pilot is the topmost concern, and so it has pulled out all the stops so that a pilot can feel secure from the moment they step inside.

Additionally, it hopes that alongside this security, the pilot will enjoy the time piloting the SkyRunner MK 3.2 and the freedom it grants them. Of course, even having cultivated such an exemplary base of clients and partners who are enthusiastic about its machine and with such a committed and diligent staff who ensure its work is well-engineered and top-of-the-range, Covid-19 proved a struggle for SkyRunner to cope with. Specifically, like many manufacturing companies in the macro scale and all around the world, SkyRunner encountered issues regarding its supply chains; the outbreak has certainly functioned to showing the industry just how fragile these really are.

Adaptable

Therefore – and going forward – SkyRunner forecasts significant overhaul in these processes in order to make them more adaptable in the face of crisis. Indeed, the company in and of itself had to implement such measures during the course of the pandemic as it grappled with the scarcity of materials due to borders being closed and the like, and it responded by early, aggressive diversification. This in essence meant that it could build up enough inventory to sustain it throughout the crisis as it had expanded the sources it was using for its manufacturing processes, keeping up these steps throughout the past 18 months so that it could still consistently deliver.

Moreover, this had the pleasing result of SkyRunner being late on only one delivery and only by a couple of weeks. It was, in this manner, able to weather most of the more disruptive impacts of the outbreak as far as the business was concerned, battening down the hatches during the global shakeup so that it could protect its staff's job's, its customer's money, and its own investments. Today, it has multiple different pathways for all critical components and a substantial inventory that it puts to the task of serving its ever growing client base, making good use of its different resources to ensure that production is always kept ticking over at a stable rate and is able to ramp up quickly in order to meet demand.

Meeting demand

Rising to meet the growing demand for its machines has certainly been a large contributing factor to the growth of SkyRunner. Furthermore, this has allowed SkyRunner to remain fiercely competitive and innovating at a blistering pace alongside its wider industry, as it recognizes the importance of keeping a finger on the pulse of updates, developments, and innovations. Engineering trade offs are absolutely crucial to the health of the sector in the macro scale, and with new technologies, materials, and manufacturing processes being developed and reshaped on a daily basis, those who fall behind in the world of aviation innovation are left behind.

Luckily, this has never been a concern for SkyRunner. It has always prized itself on keeping up with the pace of the world outside of itself, and its safe, simple, certified platform welcomes change with an inherently modular design that is easy for SkyRunner to refit and reshape in order to meet the demands of aviation and its professionals. For instance, its factory demonstration aircraft is the oldest aircraft in SkyRunner's fleet, but it still features all the latest technological upgrades, developments, and features, so much so that it is still on par with the newer models that the company produces out of its exemplary manufacturing process.

Upgrading legacy models in this way, SkyRunner can be confident that alongside the prestige these crafts carry, the crafts are upgraded to still be fiercely competitive in terms of the innovations implemented within the machine itself. From its communications systems to its engine, and its body panels to its seating options, everything can be switched out for something better as and when those things are developed. This, SkyRunner is pleased to say, it also made possible thanks to its exemplary technological partners. Collins Aerospace, a company that has been in close partnership with this LA based firm for a while to great effect, has provided the installation and integration of a TASE-400 Electro Optical and Infrared stabilized camera system into the machines, allowing for supremely clear imaging from altitude.

This has become another key draw to SkyRunner, and is also joined by the work of Sylvus Technologies installations of a high-bandwidth datalink within the craft itself, enabling the pilot to offboard video and control the TASE-400 through a mesh network to a ground station. This ground station also doesn't have to be local; thanks to the mingling of Sylvus Technologies forward-thinking innovations and Skyrunner's modular capabilities, the ground station in question can be anywhere in the world. Additionally, GoTenna also has been involved in offering its own ingenuity to the MK 3.2. This company has installed a tiny yet powerful mesh networking device that allows SkyRunner to be used as an airborne node for over-the-horizon communication.

The future

Meanwhile, Tough Stump Technologies created and brought to the table its Augmented Reality flight software for use in SkyRunner's US governmental clients' flights, specifically for use in the Team Awareness Kit ecosystem that drastically reduces pilot workload and ensures they can focus on flying safely. With its team of predominantly veterans, SkyRunner is proud of how far it has come and excited to see how much further it has yet to go, with the remainder of 2022 being dedicated to focusing on a project to create a completely autonomous SkyRunner that uses artificial intelligence, as well continuing to provide for its customers in African nations and US border protection. ■

Outpatient App

Care Coordination Digital Health Solutions Provider of The Year - USA

User simplicity is key

Outpatient App is a digital health, medical task and care coordination tool for patients, families, medical providers, and caregivers.

Recognized for its outstanding product with the International Elite 100 award, Outpatient App has been used in health systems and senior living communities for collaboration and communication across caregivers, providers, and families.

Outpatient is a mission-driven company with its view, team culture, and openness critical to its success. The company stays at the forefront by working with the most talented and well-resourced customers and organizations globally. Peter Yewell, Co-Founder and COO of Outpatient, states, "We've been able to match up to our strengths of speed and simple UI with their strengths in expertise and information access. This makes for an effective partnership." Overall, the company has all-hands meetings weekly where it covers everything going on within the business, and this leadership style builds trust and stability through highs and lows.

Outpatient is a simple, easy to use, digital health platform and is a mobile-first system that's now available on a desktop browser and any connected device. "Since our beginnings, we have applied consumer user simplicity to the digital health space. We also release full app store updates to our product monthly based on user feedback. Since our original launch in September 2018, we have released 42 full release updates in 36 months," states Peter.

Military adaptation

Most recently, Outpatient has been adapted for the US military, including the US Air Force, as a medical readiness tracking and coordination system for deployment clearance. In this case, much like health systems, the collaboration is across numerous groups - military medical providers, service members, commanding officers, and others.

The evolution of the health industry is now front and center for almost everyone in technology and business. "The Covid-19 pandemic has driven change but also benefits almost everyone going forward. The health industry will soon be a much more stable and efficient system compared to pre-pandemic. It has been forced on the world to make this happen," explains Peter.

Collaboration

Moreover, the larger health system companies now want to collaborate with Outpatient in a manner that did not exist two years ago. The overall interest in making patient access to information easier is amazingly better in such a short period.

"We think this trend will continue and reduce costs of health care significantly. By embracing digital technology and patient access to information, provider systems are more efficient and focus on what they do best (healthcare)," states Peter.

In all implementations, Outpatient enables scheduling, messaging communications, task assignments, automatic notifications, and updates - all inside a simple and easy to use interface. Peter explains, "The company has a product and engineering team with technology backgrounds from Facebook, Nest / Google, Yahoo, Amazon, and Salesforce. We all have extensive experience in scaling global technology platforms (and all family caregivers too)."

This focus on a consumer-simple user interface and iteration speed is unique in the health industry. In aggregate, the global health industry is 25% of the world GDP and similarly in the U.S.

It's an enormous and mostly a big slow-moving behemoth. "To succeed in this industry, we believed you must focus on a sliver component, succeed there and then expand," explains Peter.

The Covid-19 pandemic significantly disrupted the company's focus because most health systems, including elder care and senior living facilities, were almost entirely paused during 2020.

"Our successful focus from 2019 almost killed our existence, so we had to adapt quickly," Peter explains, "During this same period, we won a contract with the US Air Force to adapt our health application to improve military medical readiness (medical clearance for deployment). This is how we initially survived 2020, but then we won a second contract and are now continuing to expand - not just with the military but government-sponsored population health management."

The Covid-19 pandemic dramatically accelerated a slow moving transition to Telehealth, and Outpatient benefited and contributed to this acceleration. "We believe today we're at the center of a fundamental shift in population health management," explains Peter, and thus proven with its most recent recognition as the Care Coordination Digital Health Solutions Provider of The Year - USA. Aptly named and appropriately honored. ■

GC Skin Boutique

Laser Hair Removal Specialists of the Year - Gold Coast - Australia

Inspiring clients to feel their best

GC Skin Boutique is a cosmetic clinic with a team of Dermal Therapists, Laser Technicians, Beauty Therapists and Cosmetic Nurses. GC is renowned as the Best Laser Hair Removal Specialists in the Gold Coast and, since its establishment in 2017, has grown exponentially.

Gabrielle Singh founded GC Skin Boutique in 2017, creating an environment that draws in such a wide diversity of clients of all ages and gender. Initially, GC started with a moderate service list to accommodate almost all the needs of its clients. However, due to a lack of offering within the community, over time, this list has grown and added additional services to cater to the wider needs of its clients, particularly within the advancing anti-ageing sector.

Moreover, Gabrielle has spent nearly three years formulating her cosmeceutical skincare range, Cosmology Skincare, which she launched 12 months ago. During this time, GC has seen an abundance of success and aims to continue the growth. Gabrielle explains, "The results we have received are phenomenal, and again this comes with creating a skincare range that is designed to see visible results and educate our customers."

Gabrielle has taken her knowledge and experience with clients and their skin concerns and put that into creating something GC is confident that clients will love. Gabrielle states, "Our goals and values certainly have changed over the years, as social media influences today's beauty image. It's an unrealistic image for our younger generation to follow, so I pride myself on educating the young and influencing them more positively and getting our clients to feel confident within their skin."

The difference between GC and other competitors is that it thrives on having a boutique style and giving all its clients a personalised luxury experience. Gabrielle explains, "We have clients who travel to GC in Coolangatta from Brisbane, Byron Bay, and we have had clients come from the Sunshine Coast and Coffs Harbour to visit our clinic. Without our clients, we don't have a business, so they are the most important thing to us."

For GC, it is essential to stay ahead of trends and the team are therefore always searching for new and innovative treatments and technology.

Gabrielle states, "We wouldn't be doing our clients justice if we couldn't bring them the best there is - this is our job: to bring the knowledge and experience to our clients. We thrive off results, and to grow in this industry, you need to be up to date with everything because the beauty industry is forever growing, and it's not going to slow down."

The internal culture at GC is about bringing to life a skin health and wellness brand to inspire its clients to look and feel their confident best. Gabrielle explains, "We want to take our clients on an individual journey of empowerment to achieve that inner beauty and confidence that is within them. By doing that, we are not only giving them an amazing experience in the clinic but making them feel part of a group of empowering women who support each other by building other women up."

Currently, GC is working on opening a second clinic located in the famous Surfers Paradise. Gabrielle explains everything from the interior designer to the builder, and everyone involved is incredible. So much thought has been put into every little detail, and I am so excited for everyone to experience this space and continue on this journey with us."

The beauty industry seems to be changing today to be embracing a more holistic and natural approach. Gabrielle states, "Clients are moving away from traditional beauty treatments and are investing more in high-end anti-ageing treatments that rejuvenate, hydrate and plump the skin rather than using fillers that create an unnatural look."

Due to this change, GC aims to continue its research in the industry and implement anything new that the team believes in and meet popular customer demand. ■
