We are Agile because...

... we focus on customer outcomes, rather than stakeholder outputs – to achieve this we fall in love with the customers' problem, not with our solution

... we work in small, cross-functional, self-organising, collaborative teams and network with other teams – and we volunteered to be on this team

... "fun", "inspired", "motivated" are terms which describe how we feel about our work

... we approach a list of features as a living document and a set of options, which we relentlessly re-prioritise to ensure we deliver the maximum value

... our teams have full decision-making authority, and a preference for acting now

... we are fully transparent, and have clarity and context with regards to the goals we are working towards

... we run pilots and experiments as we search for the best solutions to reach our goals

... we work on small tasks, and in short iterations, delivering frequently to maximise opportunities for feedback

... we are flexible, open-minded, adaptable, pragmatic and framework agnostic

... we work in an environment where trust and psychological safety is afforded to us by team members and those outside the team – "Respect for People" drives us
