EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

During this quarter, Snehavardhini Social Trust led a series of impactful initiatives focused on environmental sustainability, education, health, and community empowerment. Environment Month was marked by seed distribution, plantation drives, and awareness sessions, actively involving schools and village communities in eco-conscious practices.

Key highlights included Parents' Day, Friendship Day, and Van Mahotsav, which fostered emotional bonding, peer relationships, and environmental responsibility. The Trust also facilitated academic assessments, women's health check-ups, and awareness sessions on POCSO and POSH, reinforcing safety, well-being, and legal literacy.

Across both village-level and center-based programs, educational and cultural activities promoted child development, strengthened family and community ties, and encouraged collective participation in addressing social issues.

KEY OBJECTIVES: JUNE–AUGUST 2025

- Enhance community awareness on environmental protection and sustainable living practices
- Promote tree plantation initiatives among school children and residents
- Support rural families through seed distribution and kitchen gardening education
- Empower women with practical knowledge of home cultivation and self-reliance
- Reduce reliance on market produce by encouraging community-based vegetable gardening
- Strengthen parent–child relationships through purposeful engagement activities
- Foster friendship, empathy, and teamwork among children through interactive programs
- Increase understanding of child protection laws (POCSO) and workplace safety (POSH)
- Improve women’s health through preventive screenings and wellness education
- Advance environmental stewardship through hands-on conservation efforts
- Assess academic performance and identify areas for targeted educational support

PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS: JUNE–AUGUST 2025

KEY CHALLENGES ENCOUNTERED JUNE–AUGUST 2025

- Weather-Related Disruptions:

Heavy rainfall affected outdoor sessions and delayed plantation activities, requiring last-minute adjustments to planned schedules.

- Infrastructure Limitations:

Some households lacked adequate space or containers for home gardening, limiting participation in kitchen garden initiatives.

- Capacity Building Needs:

A few participants required repeated support to grasp cultivation techniques, highlighting the need for ongoing guidance.

- Parental Engagement Constraints:

Work commitments prevented some parents from attending Parents' Day, indicating a need for more flexible engagement strategies.

KEY CHALLENGES ENCOUNTERED JUNE–AUGUST 2025

- Resource Constraints:

Limited availability of materials restricted the scale of tree plantation efforts.

- Health Follow-ups:

Post-screening, some women required additional medical support, underscoring the importance of sustained health interventions.

- Awareness Gaps:

Continued sensitization is needed on POCSO and POSH to ensure a deeper understanding and community-wide adoption.

- Logistical Barriers:

Travel and coordination challenges led to reduced student participation in the educational exposure visit.

- Social Resistance:

In certain areas, topics like black magic and child marriage faced resistance, requiring more nuanced and persistent awareness efforts.

KEY CHALLENGES ENCOUNTERED JUNE–AUGUST 2025

- Resource Constraints:

Limited availability of materials restrict

- Parental Involvement in Education:

Strengthening parents' active participation in children's learning remains a priority.

- Community Mobilization:

Consistent efforts are needed to encourage broader and sustained participation in Gram Sabha meetings.

CONCLUSION

- During the June–August quarter, Snehavardhini Social Trust made significant strides in promoting environmental awareness, child protection, education, and community empowerment. Environment Month activities encouraged sustainable practices through plantation drives, seed distribution, and group-building sessions that fostered teamwork among women and youth. Educational materials supported practical learning on eco-friendly living.
- A focused POCSO awareness session for teachers addressed child protection laws and the issue of child marriage, with strong engagement and appreciation from participants. Monthly projects, including the theme “My Heroes are My Parents,” helped children develop writing and thinking skills while strengthening emotional bonds.
- The Trust continued its long-standing work with the Katkari Tribal community across 24 villages, including 8 supported by DSV. Through partnerships with ZP schools and Bal Sansad activities, children gained confidence in public speaking, with some delivering speeches in English for the first time.

CONCLUSION

Prize winners inspired broader participation, and teachers' efforts visibly improved communication and stage presence among students.

- Snehavardhini remains committed to deepening these initiatives and fostering inclusive, empowered communities.
