During the formation of the Federal Reserve, at Jekyll Island, the decision was made to redesign the United States so that federal power would no longer lie in the hands of the publicly elected president and vice president, but in the hands of the “Secret Presidency.” The public were becoming far too irresponsible and uninformed, and to a large mass of migrants, labor unions and socialists. The powers behind the throne began forming this design in the late 1800’s within the Jekyll Island Club. In 1910, they formed the Federal Reserve, and, with support from the leaders of the Navy and the Army, agreed to select a Secret President who would serve at their discretion, for as short or long a time as they wished. The publicly elected president and vice president would be quietly manipulated through an outreach arm as the Chief of Staff to the Office of the President. The public would be kept in the dark about the base of power behind the Chief of Staff.

The military buy-off was that they would never perform a military coup, that the Pentagon would be built, and that a “black” budget for the military would be installed into the U.S. Congress that would be approved, without public discussion, by the President, under the influence of the “Secret” presidency.

The Secret Presidency operations remained in New York City, where its operations remain in Rockefeller Center, on the actual 13th floor, which everyone claims does not exist, but if pictures had ever been studied carefully, it would be clear that there is a 13th floor, representing the original colonies. The Rockefeller Family maintained its operations on the 56th floor.
