

Quick feedback (if it's in yellow)

- You structured your text like a story, in chronological order. I want it structured like an essay, around ideas.
- The last sentence of the introduction is not a thesis statement. Re-read the instructions for examples.
- The first sentence of your paragraph should be a “topic sentence.” Re-read the instructions for examples.
- Your topic sentence is not clear enough. Check that it clearly names the problem, the solution, and the benefit.
- Be explicit in your use of sources. Name the person whose ideas you are using.
- You were supposed to use a video AND a text, in each paragraph. It looks like you did not really do that.
- Use the sources actively. Don't just quickly mention something and then move on. USE them.
- Use the sources more. You can use them for the problem and then again for the solution, for example.
- Use the sources in both paragraphs. Each paragraph is supposed to be on a different “theme,” sources.
- Your essay is about yourself, not people in general. Do not write, e.g. “If you work less, you will...”
- Be more specific about your own life. Tell me stories that really happened to you and illustrate your ideas.
- Have a specific plan to attain your goal. It will help you make your ideas more specific.
- A paragraph should only have one main idea, and develop it a lot. You have too many ideas for this kind of text.
- Your paragraph has some excessive repetition. Develop more instead, using concepts or anecdotes.
- Your paragraphs are not distinct enough. Each paragraph is supposed to be about a different idea.

Quick feedback (if it's in yellow)

- You structured your text like a story, in chronological order. I want it structured like an essay, around ideas.
- The last sentence of the introduction is not a thesis statement. Re-read the instructions for examples.
- The first sentence of your paragraph should be a “topic sentence.” Re-read the instructions for examples.
- Your topic sentence is not clear enough. Check that it clearly names the problem, the solution, and the benefit.
- Be explicit in your use of sources. Name the person whose ideas you are using.
- You were supposed to use a video AND a text, in each paragraph. It looks like you did not really do that.
- Use the sources actively. Don't just quickly mention something and then move on. USE them.
- Use the sources more. You can use them for the problem and then again for the solution, for example.
- Use the sources in both paragraphs. Each paragraph is supposed to be on a different “theme,” sources.
- Your essay is about yourself, not people in general. Do not write, e.g. “If you work less, you will...”
- Be more specific about your own life. Tell me stories that really happened to you and illustrate your ideas.
- Have a specific plan to attain your goal. It will help you make your ideas more specific.
- A paragraph should only have one main idea, and develop it a lot. You have too many ideas for this kind of text.
- Your paragraph has some excessive repetition. Develop more instead, using concepts or anecdotes.
- Your paragraphs are not distinct enough. Each paragraph is supposed to be about a different idea.