The Park Bench is a voluntary charitable organisation which aims to provide access to a lending library service for people in Bristol who find it difficult to register with the Public Library.

Thank you!

For donations, encouragement and support, thanks go to the following –

Quaker Homeless Action for start-up funding, and in particular Gillian Lowther of the London Mobile Library for homeless people, for initial inspiration and continuing encouragement.

All at Logos House (the Salvation Army Hostel) for their continued hospitality and encouragement.

Val Thompson, Jonny Angel and all the team at the Wild Goose café, for making us feel appreciated in the Friday morning session.

Everyone who has donated books – staff, borrowers and others who have heard of us!

Our borrowers – whose enthusiasm has kept us going.

Our volunteers who have run library sessions, come to meetings and sorted books.

- A big thank you!

Chair's report

I am delighted to present this report of the year 2018. We have completed thirteen full years of operation!

The Park Bench service in 2018

Once again, this year we've continued to provide a unique service: popular books available on free loan with 'no strings attached' (no fines for returning books late or not at all) for people who are homeless or in temporary accommodation. For our book borrowers, joining a public library is rarely a realistic option, and buying books even less so. Providing a 'good read' is one way of making a small difference and enriching someone's life.

Our well-established Thursday evening (6pm-7pm) staffed library service at Logos House, the Salvation Army hostel, continued, as did our staffed service in the Wild Goose café (Friday mornings between 10.30am and 12 noon). At these locations, as well as lending books, we will try to find specific titles or more books by a favourite author on request.

We maintained or helped to maintain shelves of books for loan in other locations:

- * One25 women's drop-in
- * The Julian Trust night shelter for homeless people
- * St Anne's 24 hr shelter (until March)

Occasional visits ensured that the book supply was replenished with new titles.

Our grateful thanks go to all individuals and organisations who have donated books over the last year. Without you, we could not have the library! Sometimes new book titles appear on our book trolleys, and we have no idea who donated them. Many are received from our own borrowers, keen to share the pleasure of reading. And our volunteers keep an eye open for requested titles in charity shops, etc.

Being a volunteer handing out books is not an impersonal task: volunteers are always willing to chat, and many a conversation about books or other topics has taken place. Personal contact with a friendly volunteer is an important part of the service. Even in those sessions where no books are lent out, we never fail to have interesting and, we hope, encouraging conversations, on everything from Shakespeare to Brexit.

The 'Facts and Figures' section in this Annual Report details the volume of the service at Logos House and the Wild Goose and the current trends in its take-up. Over the year we had a combined total of 111 visits from borrowers and 165 books loaned. In addition, we have many readers at the locations where we keep the bookshelves stocked – so altogether that's a lot of readers and books.

Volunteers

All this does not happen without the work and continued support of volunteers. Heather is our secretary, ensuring that agendas and minutes are sent out. She also does much fetching and carrying of books and sorts them out, recycling any too dilapidated to use. Heather also manages the volunteers, drawing up rotas and providing support when needed.

Thanks also go to Richard who supports Heather in her tasks, as well as being our Treasurer and minute-taker at our quarterly volunteer meetings.

Crucially, thank you to the reliable and friendly band of volunteers. Andy, Jenny and Carrie are a steady presence at the Wild Goose. Richard, Lucy, Tim and Michelle attend sessions at Logos House, and Heather appears regularly at both. Stella has given extra assistance in both locations whenever needed.

We have quarterly meetings when necessary to which all trustees, volunteers and other interested individuals are most welcome. Here we share information and discuss progress, problems and plans. We kept in touch between meetings with emails and phone calls.

Looking ahead

What will next year bring? We hope to keep providing the current service of staffed bookshelves at Logos House and the Wild Goose. We will keep the services under review and monitor their use. We will be alert for opportunities for developments – such as the possibility of offering a staffed lending session or other book-related activities at St Anne's Shelter. If any Logos House residents express an interest in literacy support, we can now refer them to Myra Parsons, who will liaise with EasyRead. We will try to make sure we make good use of our resources, both books and volunteers. We have started to consider looking for source of small amounts of additional funding.

Above all, we will aim to provide opportunities for homeless people to enjoy reading, whether by browsing through a good stock of books or seeing friendly people at our weekly locations.

<h3>Treasurer's Report</h3>

Our expenses this year are £60 bank costs and £92.67 related to website and domain registration. We received an anonymous donation of £92.67 to fund the website & domain registration.

We receive many donations of used books which are not reflected in the accounts and I have included an estimated £25 for donations in kind for books purchased by supporters and not reclaimed.

We end the year with £117.60 in the bank.

Richard Drake, Treasurer

Facts and Figures

We do not judge the success of Park Bench solely by counting numbers of books and borrowers: even if only a few people have their lives enriched by Park Bench it would be worthwhile. But we think it is useful to monitor the service, so that we have some helpful statistics for users, members, volunteers, trustees, people who have funded us and anyone who may be thinking of setting up a similar service elsewhere.

We do not keep statistics about the use of books we provide on shelves and boxes, but we do have some facts and figures about the service at The Wild Goose and the Salvation Army hostel (Logos House).

The Wild Goose

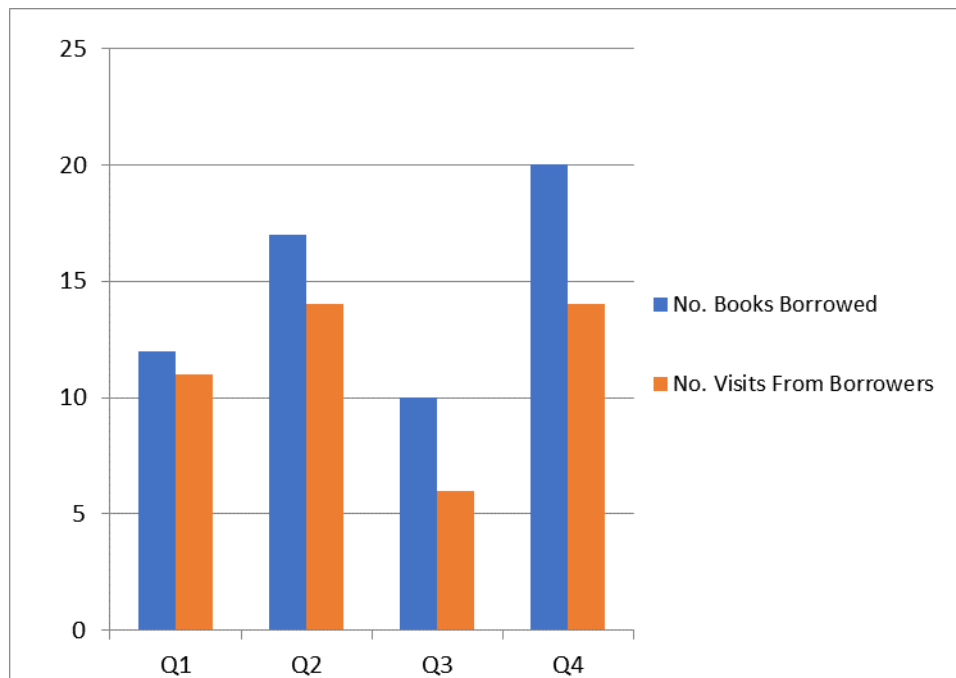

The service at the Wild Goose Café was set up in November 2010 following the closure of the New Street drop-in centre. So 2018 is the eighth full year for which we have kept a record for the weekly Friday morning library service.

Key points are:

- The library was available every Friday morning throughout the year when the cafe was open.
- We had 45 visits from book borrowers who borrowed a total of 59 books a slight increase from 2017
- The take-up of the service varied: on several weeks we had no borrowers, but we usually have 1 or 2 and one week had 5
- We also had contact with many more people who did not borrow books, but liked to chat about reading or other issues. This, too, is part of our service and on almost all weeks we chatted to people using the café.

Salvation Army hostel (Logos House)

We started keeping records of the library service at the Salvation Army hostel in mid-October 2007, when it had become established, so 2018 is the 11th full year we monitored.

Key points are:

- The library was available every Thursday evening in 2018 between 6 and 7pm
- We had 66 visits from book borrowers who borrowed a total of 106 books an increase from 2017
- Although there are quite a few weeks where no books are borrowed the average is 2 books a week and one week 8 books were borrowed by 4 residents
- Every week, we also chatted to people who didn't borrow books, about reading and other issues. This is also part of our service.
