

You can be a Cubist too!

Picasso was experimental in his approach to art, often painting a common object or person from many different angles in one picture – like you are seeing the front, the back and the sides of the object or figure at the same time. This is called Cubism. You can be a Cubist too!

Draw or paint your portrait in Picasso's Cubist style – it can be a portrait of anyone, even your cat! Choose colors that express your mood.

Want to really mix things up? Cut out your portrait's silhouette and turn it over. Then, using a pencil, draw random geometric shapes like puzzle pieces.

Now, cut out the geometric shapes and rearrange your masterpiece in a new way!
