Nurses for America, a grassroots group of nurses with diverse specialties and expertise, applaud Senator John Fetterman (D-Pa) for voluntarily admitting himself to Walter Reed Hospital for treatment of clinical depression. By his action Senator Fetterman helps tear down the wall of stigma facing those with mental health conditions.

SAMHSA's (The Substance Abuse and Mental Health Administration) Tips For Living Well with Clinical Depression states: "It's one of the most common and treatable mental health disorders. With early, continuous treatment, people can gain control of their symptoms, feel better, and get back to enjoying their lives." We wish Senator Fetterman and his family the best results in the coming days.
