BACH FESTIVAL AT KNOWLES CHAPEL

A Bach Festival of three programs is to be given in Knowles Memorial Chapel on Sunday, March 29th. At the Morning Meditation the music will be selected from the works of the master, and in the late afternoon the Vesper program will include instrumental numbers. The Rollins A Capella Choir of fifty voices, augmented by thirty other selected voices, and accompanied by the organ and orchestral instruments, will perform choral work in the evening, including "The Magnificat," parts of "St. Matthew Passion," and "Glory, Wisdom and Thanks" motet.

In Bethlehem, Pensylvania, the Bach Festival has been an annual event for more than thirty years of world-wide importance.

MISS HELEN FERNALD TO LECTURE TUESDAY

Something different in lectures will be heard Tuesday evening at eight o'clock in the Congregational Church.

Miss Helen E. Fernald, former Gurator of the University Museum of Philadelphia, will give an illustrated address on "The Golden Treasure of Keishu and other discoveries in Korea."

Recently Miss Fernald returned from London where she attended the International Exhibition of Eastern Art. While there she addressed the Royal Academy of Arts in their regular series. She was the only woman to do this and one of two Americans.

In 1929 Miss Fernald was sent to China, Japan, and Korea to study excavations. She was curator for fourteen years. Her col-

LONGER SEASON AT THE ALABAMA

That Winter Park has been entertaining this season more guests than ever before is a fact that the hotels have not done any boasting about, but nevertheless there is most gratifying evidence that this charming resort by the lakes is becoming more appreciated each year.

One outstanding feature of this season has been its greater length. The hotels were able to open earlier and they are now at the third week of March well filled and with every prospect of remaining open until the second week of April and even later.

Mr. Henry Schenck, manager of the Alabama, who with Mr. E. J. LaChance, took over the ownership of that hotel last Spring, is especially pleased with the prospects for a six month season in Winter Park. He opened the Alabama on October 25th and will not close until May 1st. The hotel has had a splendid patronage all season, even being forced to turn people away during its height.

"If we could get people to realize the chance they take in waiting until late into December," said Mr. Schenck, "more of them would come before the cold of the North gets into their bones. Once they catch cold and have to stay in the house they become afraid of the trip. Then the roads may get icy any time after December 1st or even before. I know of people who lost their whole winter sojourn in Florida because they waited until too late to start South.

"More Northern people are taking to the idea of spending Christmas here and having the younger members of the family come down to join them. I believe there is an increasing sentiment in favor of this Central Florida section. Its climate is much preferable to the very warm points further South, and its natural beauty more pleasing.

"We have endeavored to give our guests at the Alabama a pleasant time and they have supplemented our efforts by many charming entertainments of their own. We have had concerts, moving pictures, exhibitions of photographs, paintings, and one is still coming of old mirrors. There have been folk dancing classes under the direction of Mila Gibbons for adults and children. Our putting green and croquet court have been very popular.

"From our experience this year," Mr. Schenck asserted, "we shall be able to develop a six month season at the Alabama. Our guests will benefit by better rates if they come by October 15th as it will enable the hotel to keep in operation long enough to spread the overhead instead of being obliged to meet all our charges out of a short period. As we opened last October 25th and will not close until May 1st we will have made substantial progress toward our goal this season."

Theatregoers Enjoy "The Bishop Misbehaves"

The intelligentsia of Winter Park gave unmistakable signs of enjoying what the man in the street calls "a good show" last week when the Rollins Student Players gave two performances of the comedy "The Bishop Misbehaves". Not that the play was in any sense crdinary, for it is the work of a mastercraftsman, nor was the performance lacking in distinction. It was good theatre and the atmosphere of the playhouse was charged with that high voltage that is generated when the audience is keenly inter-

NOTABLE EXHIBITION OF PRINTS AT ALABAMA

By Mabel Mountsier

The loan exhibition of prints, arranged by the Department of Art of Rollins College in the Alabama Hotel, is a notable event in Win-ter Park. The range of prints, 85 in number, is surprisingly compre-hensive since it includes fine examples of the work of many artists from Durer and Rembrandt to the present time, loaned by collec-tors of this locality. From the rich collection of Mr. John Tiedtke of Toledo and Orlando are three etch-ings each by Rembrandt, Durer, and Daumier, and one by Goya. Of these the Melancholia of Durer, Christ Driving the Money-changers from the Temple of Rembrandt, and the Bull Fight of Goya are particularly good impressions. Mr. Tiedtke's lithographs of Daumier, together with two owned by Mr. Hugh McKean and two after Daumier from Dr. and Mrs. William H. Fox's collection, furnish a variety of his trenchant graphic satires, made originally for the French satirical sheet, Charivari. Here are dramatic characterizations of Les ALABAMA HOTEL The Hotel Alabama opened its 1941-1942 season on October 15, welcoming a substantial number of guests desiring to enjoy the superb fall weather of Winter Park. During the late summer, an at-tractive series of balconies and a sun deck were constructed at the east end of the main building of the Alabama, adding another wel-come feature to the many facilities for the comfort of guests. Beginning on January 1, tea is reved every afternoon in the main lounge of the Alabama. The week-ly bridge parties also begin that evening under the direction of Miss Charlotte Broadus, social hostess. Instead of presenting each Sun-day evening the same musical or-ganization, as has been the custom in recent seasons, a different type of entertainment will be offered every week. A number of art ex-hibitions and other attractions are bunday programs. The spacious grounds of the Ala-bama, which contribute so much to the atmosphere of quiet and pri-vacy, are in excellent condition.
