GARY WILLNER

Gary Willner was born in New York City. As a child Gary was fascinated with ventriloquism. He taught himself how to throw his voice and practiced the art all through his childhood and early teens. Gary became interested in music when the Beatles came to America. He had his own garage band, singing and playing his guitar to the pop songs he heard on radio and TV. It was at this time that someone gave Gary an Ella Fitzgerald album and Gary was hooked forever on jazz and standards. A few years later Gary auditioned for the sammy Kaye Band, and much to his parents disappointment he got the job. Gary toured with the Sammy Kaye band all through the early and mid 70's playing theaters and dance halls throughout the US. A musician had told him that Murry McCekern, the leader of the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra, was looking for a male vocalist to sing the Frank Sinatra/Tommy Dorsey songbook. He auditioned and got the job, again muck to his parents dissapointment. It was at that time that Gary Willner performed for President Jimmy Carter in 1976 at the Inaugural Ball in Washington D.C.
