JobDriver / CONSTRUCTION PRODUCTIVITY SOFTWARE APPLICATION NARRATIVE DESCRIPTION
DATE 8/19/19 – Author – (Trip) Syd W. Smith III - CONFIDENTIAL

Introduction

The names "JobDriver" and "software" are used interchangeably to describe the product throughout. JobDriver is a construction productivity matrix. Construction is very limited when it comes to technical tools in the industry. Data is collected at a selected interval and displayed over time to provide a visual dashboard of jobsite or project production. JobDriver makes it easy to see a wide array of valuable productivity information and importantly JobDriver highlights areas of inefficiency where work could be happening, but is not.

How it works – ATTACHED EXHIBIT A

A basic template allows for information on an x, y and/or z axis to display production information in 2D, 3D or as a model. Area information at a minimum is populated on an x and y axis to provide coordinates or detail for a location, or percent complete on y axis and plan numbers with activities for a trade on the x axis. The display can mimic actual project shape, plan grid, thermometer style, or custom. Second tier or additional location details are provided on an axis to help drill down specific locations. However the template is set the productivity matrix is by trade and trade specific activities are populated along a chosen axis to track for that trade. Field personnel verify the certain activities are complete for a trade. By populating complete items over a selected time period represents production or measures productivity for that trade. The trades are linked so that completion of one activity by a trade highlights that work is available for another following trade. The software synchronizes trades and the flow of work to produce a live productivity matrix. Parties can be notified that work is available. The software tracks and creates a history of how long work is available. Notification can be shared over a project group for accountability to the project. Few markets or industries lend themselves to such valuable, actual measurable productivity as the construction industry.

Results

Productivity information in construction is paramount. The JobDriver dashboard allows management to see an enormous amount of vital information all on one dashboard. All trades and their activities are included for the entire project. Production rates are key to managing manpower at a cost-effective level. An all to common problem in construction projects are the items and areas of work that remain stagnant or areas of work that could be completed and no one is working there. There is always an area management walks by and thinks "why is this or that item not done", or "why isn't anyone working here". JobDriver creates a real productivity dashboard of what is happening and highlights what is not happening. There is enormous value in the number of work areas that sit inactive for great lengths of time. JobDriver can identify a problem area and provide a reason something has stopped. Moreover, most importantly JobDriver highlights areas of work that could be progressing and are not.

Conclusion

JobDriver increases production exponentially. JobDriver is a unique tool in the construction industry, which currently has limited technical tools. It can identify and highlight unproductive areas and activities and cut them multifold. JobDriver provides a visual dashboard of the most vital project information related to productivity in construction projects. JobDriver optimizes productivity and indisputably increases profitability.
