CASE STUDY CHANGE MANAGEMENT

The challenge: Management determined the need for major organizational change, impacting all units along with systems capturing their respective project information across business lines and countries.

The goal: Improve upon existing plan which comprised assigning back-office staff to manually process each organizational change update within the systems.

The strategy: Develop an algorithm which would automate the system changes, thereby eliminating operational risks associated with manual plan.

The outcome: Successful implementation of new organization in partnership across business and technology functions. Basis for algorithm used for future reorganizations.

Case studies for ARYA services taken primarily for work conducted for World Bank Group (I.F.C.) and other endeavors. Application of practices reflect future ARYA direction.
