The Public-Safety Technology Landscape

Fragmented Systems vs. a Unified Justice Pipeline

Today's public-safety ecosystem is fragmented. Each vendor solves a single slice of the emergency-to-justice workflow. No platform unifies civilians, responders, prosecutors, and courts into a single real-time evidence pipeline.

Gotta'Ya	Existing Systems	What's Missing in Others
Civilian → Law Enforcement → Prosecutor → Judge	Axon: Officer video + evidence cloud	No civilian livestream ingestion
Real-time livestream with GPS	RapidSOS: Device data to 911	No court integration
Automatic chain-of-custody	Live911: Live 911 audio	No end-to-end chain-of-custody
School safety integration	Getac: Police evidence suite	No unified justice infrastructure
Unified justice pipeline	Digital Barriers: Tactical live video	No cross-agency evidence flow

Gotta'Ya is the only platform that checks every box across the entire justice pipeline.

Why Existing Systems Fall Short

Axon, RapidSOS, Live911, Getac, and Digital Barriers each deliver strong capabilities — but only within their own silos. None provide a unified, real-time evidence pipeline that spans civilians, responders, prosecutors, and judges.

Gotta'Ya is the first platform designed to unify the entire justice ecosystem.

Gotta'Ya's Unique Value Proposition

1. First end-to-end justice pipeline
2. Real-time verified evidence from the moment of incident
3. Civilian-initiated livestreams with automatic preservation
4. Seamless integration across agencies
5. Designed for schools, communities, and law enforcement
6. Patent-pending architecture

A New Standard for Truth, Safety & Accountability

Gotta'Ya is not another tool — it's the infrastructure that connects them all.

A single pipeline.

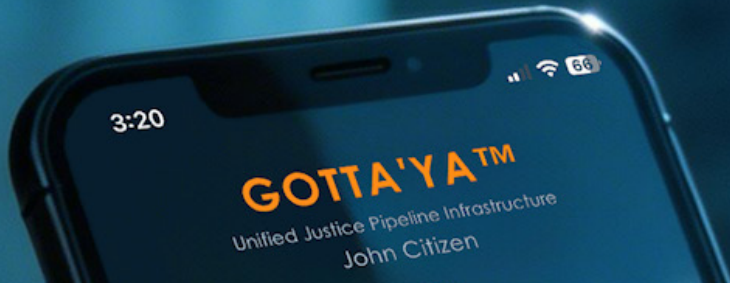

A single truth.

A safer, more accountable society.

The Missing Link in Public Safety

Despite billions invested in public-safety technology, no platform connects the full chain of events — from the moment a civilian captures an incident to the moment a judge reviews the evidence.

Gotta'Ya fills this gap with a unified, real-time justice pipeline.
