ANNOUNCING · JUNE 2026

Now ISO 13485 certified.

The medical device quality standard, applied to every part we make.

Zakobe makes small, exact stamped contacts and connectors for medical device, critical power and precision electronics OEMs. In June 2026, Husk Registrars certified our quality system to ISO 13485:2016, the international standard for medical device quality systems. It joins our ISO 9001:2015 certification, held since 2020.

NOT MAKING MEDICAL PARTS?

Here's why you may care: contract review, change control, traceability and customer notification run on every job in our certified system, medical or not.

WHAT IT MEANS

What it means for your parts.

Requirements captured before we cut steel

Your flow-downs for traceability, cleanliness, packaging, labeling and outsourced work, including FDA QMSR, are set before we accept the order.

Traceability from coil to shipment

Material, heat or lot, job, inspection and release are linked. Mill certs are reviewed on receipt; suspect material is held.

No unannounced changes

No change to material, supplier, tooling, method or inspection without review, and your approval when required. When in doubt, we hold the change.

A project file for every medical job

Requirements, traceability, supplier evidence, inspection and release records kept together as your component-supplier file.

Validation where inspection can't see

When a result can't be fully verified by later inspection, or your project calls for it, we provide documented validation evidence.

Fast, plain notification

If a problem may have shipped, you hear from us as soon as practical, targeting one business day, with lot, quantity and containment.

NEXT STEP

Add Zakobe to your approved supplier list.

Reply or call, and we'll send what you need:

- Our certificates and supplier-questionnaire answers for your file.
- A quote on any print, with your quality flow-downs captured up front.
