Positioning Of Feet Often Overlooked Vital Part In Developing Riding Horse By Frank J. Buchman

"A positive start is the key to an outstanding finished working horse." However, that requires skill and finesse, according to Chris Cox, professional horseman and clinician. At a recent colt starting event, the Mineral Wells, Texas, trainer revealed tips to prepare horses for a performance career. "It is vital to start a young with soft cues every single time and only increase as needed", Cox emphasized. "Communicate to your horse by gently showing the horse what you'd like it to do," he said. "Feel in your own body persuades the colt to follow your ideas. "Do not ever jerk on a horse as it makes him defensive," Cox pointed out.

Still, if a horse isn't catching on, a firmer cue will help the horse understand boundaries. "When a horse doesn't respond to multiple requests, a sharp reprimand like heavy heel force will generally correct him," Cox said. More extreme correction is only necessary when a handler needs to defend himself from a horse kicking, biting or pawing. One of the worst things is to let a young horse become bored. "These colts want you to move forward on them," Cox said. "So you must have short sessions in a learning rhythm.

"Their mind operates so fast, and you must keep up with that," the clinician continued. "If you get too lethargic and slow, their mind gets to looking for sourness." This is true for the initial saddling and riding process as well. "Get your young horse out on the range," Cox encouraged. "Provide your horse with fresh obstacles in the arena like pushing steers, crossing bridges, even just swinging a lariat."

Feet of the horse must be controlled. "Their head has nothing to do with their feet initially," Cox explained. "The handler must concentrate on the horse's feet connecting the rein to their feet." Flexing the horse's head around with the young horse just standing can create a dangerous situation. "It is vital that all four of the feet move so the horse doesn't get stuck," Cox said. "If feet get stuck then the rest of his body becomes stiff which could result in a potentially explosive setup." When a young horse gets rambunctious, "A lot of times, it's because their feet are stuck," Cox said. "Once moving, it must be all feet, not just one or two."

After a horse is going comfortably under saddle, the final piece of the puzzle is developing more "feel" while being ridden. Again, stiffness in the horse usually indicates a problem in the feet. "Never address resistance like a tossed head by pulling on the horse's face," Cox said "Instead ask the horse to soften and move their feet smoothly. "When a rider jerks on their young horse's head, they're training them to have to raise their head the rest of their lives," Cox said. "It's not about their head it's about controlling those feet."

Historical Council Grove Pageant

Come out and watch the historic play at the Neosho River

Amphitheater on September 17th and 18th starting at 8:00pm!!

Historical Council Grove Pageant Depicts Tensions
Between Native Americans And Santa Fe Trail Settlers
By Frank J. Buchman

First settlers in Council Grove on the Santa Fe Trail were intruders on Native Americans already long-established area residents. "Times when Native American and Euro-American cultures collided 150 years ago are being relived at Council Grove," said Sharon Haun. "Voices of the Wind

People is an historically accurate depiction of the tensions surrounding those events," the committee chairperson explained. The pageant will be in the new Neosho River Amphitheater Friday and Saturday evenings, September 17-18, at 8 o'clock. "Pre-performance music and activities will begin at 7 o'clock, so plan to arrive early," Haun encouraged. Performances take the audience back in time to the mid-1850s presenting changes affecting two vastly different cultures. As the Kaw people were being relocated and European American settlers were populating Council Grove, co-existence proved to be intense. "Their stories are told in alternating perspectives of the Kaw Nation and the new settlers," Haun said. Chief Allegawaho, recorded by his real life descendent, Luther Pepper, narrates the Kaw story. Seth Hays, performed by Council Grove resident Mark Brooks, recounts the rural town's version. Written by Ron Parks and first performed in 1992, the dramatization eventually became a biennial production until last year. "Coronavirus issues caused cancelation of that scheduled presentation with the last pageant in 2018," Haun said. "However, this year's pageant will be even more special as we commemorate the 200th anniversary of the Santa Fe Trail." This multimedia production incorporates historic photos, images of the prairie landscape, and video montages. There will be live-action reenactments of a pack train, wagon train, stagecoach, gunfights, dancing, tepees, and a Kanza campfire. Entirely volunteer staff and performers present the two-hour production "Thirty members of the Kaw Nation travel to Council Grove from Kaw City, Oklahoma, to portray their ancestors," Haun said. "They enact village scenes and perform dramatic roles and traditional dances." Stadium seats or cushions are encouraged as the seating in the amphitheater is built of native limestone. "There will be a historical horse drawn wagon show and a mountain man encampment," Hawn said. "Speakers and demonstrations are scheduled to present skills needed the original discuss on Santa Additional details and ticket information can a t voices of the windpeople.com, as well as santafetrail 200.com, and on Facebook.

Equine Owners and Enthusiasts!

The Kansas Department of Agriculture Division of Animal Health is wanting equine owners to start taking proactive measurers to prevent VSV, Vesicular Stomatitis Virus.

Last year, there was an outbreak across Kansas of VSV. This year, the KDA and KHC want owners to be aware of the symptoms and signs of the virus to help prevent another outbreak from occurring.

Vesicular Stomatitus Virus (VSV) in Horses

Vesicular stomatitis virus (VSV) is a viral disease that primarily affects horses and cattle and occasionally swine, sheep, goats, llamas, and alpacas. Humans can also become infected with the disease when handling affected animals, resulting in flu-like symptoms, but this is a rare event. Time from exposure to the onset of clinical signs is 2-8 days. Infected premises are placed under quarantine for a minimum of 14 days. VSV is a state reportable disease.

Symptoms:

- 1. Excessive salivation
- 2. Lesions in the mouth & nose
- 3. Lack of appetite
- 4. Lesions around the feet
- Lameness
- 6. Teat, prepuce & ear lesions

Report:

Vesicular stomatitus is a reportable disease. To report VSV, call the Kansas Division of Animal Health at 785-564-6601.

Prevention:

- 1. Strict fly control in and around the farm
 - Manure management and elimination of fly breeding areas
 - Appropriate insecticide use for horses, barns, and outdoor areas
- 2. Do not share equipment, tools, or tack
- Separate suspect animals immediately and report
- 4. Shows, fairs, and rodeos may institute new entry requirements
 - A health certificate issued within 2-5 days prior to an event can be beneficial in reducing risks

Old Bloodlines Important For Producing Today's Top Performance Quarter Horses By Frank J. Buchman

"That horse is too old fashioned. It takes modern bloodlines and type to be successful in the Quarter Horse business today." Many times new enthusiasts to Quarter Horse ownership and exhibiting made that comment four decades ago.

To an extent, they were correct. Horses with pedigrees different than what many breeders had been producing were the show ring winners and sale toppers. They looked different and performed more exclusively to unique precision without names of foundation horses in their lineage. Time has again turned the table. "What was old is new again," according to increasing number of breeders today producing highest-priced, demanded, well-conformed athletic Quarter Horses In the '50s and '60s, it was typical for a Quarter Horse showing morning halter and afternoon rail pleasure-type competitions. Then back home in the evening rounding up cattle. As shows became more discipline-specific, it was advantageous to have a specialized Quarter Horse that performed its show-particular job better. However, that also had drawbacks. In some cases, bones and joints became more fragile, hoof sizes shrank and dispositions became temperamental. Now, a number of Quarter Horse breeders are looking back to the tried-and-true traits of older bloodlines for today's horses. Deborah Skow, Horizon Quarter Horses, Keenesburg, Colorado, and John Anderson, Willow Creek Quarter Horses, Plainview, Nebraska, are among them. "When horsemen were establishing the Quarter Horse registry, they wanted to separate it from other breeds of horses," Skow said. "They wanted an all-around horse that could do everything." The industry moved away from that to specialization. "However, the breed's original focus is again our breeding objective," Skow insisted. "We want that versatile, all-around athlete with a good disposition." Anderson's breeding program focuses on producing a horse that can work. "We run a 15,000-head feedlot and an 800-head cow ranch. Our main focus is a true cow horse" he said. "Many of today's cutting and reining horses are not true working outfit-type horses." Unlike many ranches, four-wheelers are not used in Anderson's operation. "We have 12 to 14 geldings saddled every day to check pens and drive cows," he said. "We need a horse from 14.3 to 15 hands, because a smaller horse has problems in ranch country." Both Skow and Anderson have foundation-type stallions and broodmares in their breeding programs. "We are pretty picky about what we like," Skow verified. "We will usually sit down and go carefully over what was produced the previous year." Eleven stallions used in the Horizon Quarter Horses program are mostly Poco Bueno or Doc Bar bred. "Certain mares have a better mix on one stallion than another. We are always looking to better our horses," Skow said, "I like to look at the individual and consider if I need to breed more bone or foot. Then, I might select one of our foundation horses to breed to a more modern-bred horse." Willow Creek Quarter Horses produces colts to be consistent. "We don't want to be all over the board in our breeding program," Anderson said.

Disposition is of high importance for Skow too. "We started out with some halter horses. 25 years ago. But that wasn't going to serve the interests we had," she said. "We're selling mostly to an all-around market. We need like some of the older bloodlines are more inclined to that."

"When somebody sees one of our geldings that's what we expect all of our horses to look like." Those horses have a sound mind and athletic ability. "Good disposition is first priority for us," Anderson said. "I feel horses that are going to be something our customers enjoy." Conformation of early-day Quarter Horses appeal more to these breeders. "They were big, bulldog-type horses with lots of muscle, plenty of bone and good feet," Skow said. "A lot of modern lines are more refined with intent for speed which has led to health and soundness issues. Foundation horses can provide more solid bone and mass."

Time-tested genetic positives work well with certain bloodlines to fill in genetic weaknesses. Yet all foundation bloodlines are not equal. "I think the word 'foundation' has been over generalized and used a bit too loosely," Anderson said. "There are some foundation bloodlines that needed a real cowboy to ride them. Most of today's horse owners really can't be considered working cowboys who have that ability."

The breeders incorporate some line breeding into their programs. A horse is "line bred" or the product of line breeding when it has a common ancestor outside the fourth generation. Theories of line breeding can be very involved. "While he was an outstanding cutter in his time, I don't think Poco Bueno could compete well today," Skow said. "We keep Poco Bueno stallions for breeding to some bloodlines of today. This gives us the best of both worlds and produces an exceptional horse."

Willow Creek doesn't over emphasize the foundation blood "We have a lot of Driftwood in our horses but we never tout the percentage," Anderson said. "We like Driftwood, but we think to get caught up in single-trait selection lowers the bar on a breeding program. We always intend to make horses we produce better."

Kansas Horse Council Announces Equine Economic Impact Survey

MANHATTAN, Kansas — The Kansas Horse Council, with support from the Kansas Department of Agriculture, is seeking equine owners across Kansas to participate in an Equine Economic Impact survey to generate data and information regarding this segment of the Kansas livestock industry.

The equine industry in Kansas is relatively small, compared to production livestock; however, equine ownership positively impacts the Kansas economy and should be recognized for its contributions. The equine sector in Kansas is an evolving sector that typically includes all forms of Equidae (sometimes known as the horse family) and may include educational, artistic, sport, leisure, therapeutic, and working classes of equines.

As part of the Kansas Ag Growth Strategy, leaders from throughout the Kansas equine industry collaborated in the development and implementation of long-term strategic growth goals with input and discussion among key stakeholders. One published outcome includes completing an economic impact study which led to development of the Equine Economic Impact survey.

The purpose of this survey is to assess the current economic contributions of the equine sector to Kansas. The equine sector is an economically diverse industry, and this survey will include all horse ownership regardless of use. Direct ownership provides a ripple effect supporting sales and service industries by virtue of adjunct needs, such as grain, hay, transport services, real estate, fuel, truck/trailer/tires service and sale, veterinary, farrier and so forth. Information may help identify opportunities for new niche markets or expansion of existing business and services where needs might be identified. Data should reveal relevant information to help update labor statistics in the equine industry.

The Equine Economic Impact survey is voluntary. The survey will be open through December. To take the survey, please visit www.tinyurl.com/equineks. If you have a disability and are unable to complete the survey, but wish to participate, please contact Justine Staten at 785-776-0662 or director@kansashorsecouncil.com to receive a written survey or to take the survey over the telephone.

LINK TO KANSAS EQUINE ECONOMIC SURVEY HERE!

Takes about 15 minutes. Together we can show everyone that horses are a vital part of the economy. Where would we be without horses?

Give Me A Horse

Poem by Del Shields

Give me a horse when things are upside down. He'll make me forget I have a care, how it all just came unwound.

Give me a horse when I'm feeling sad and blue.

Just feeling his girth between my knees, makes my spirit feel brand new.

Give me a horse when there's cattle work to do. I don't need an ATV to see the job go through.

Give me a horse when the grandkids come to call. We'll spend the day just ridin, as I set in the saddle tall.

Give me a horse while parading down the street. I don't need a motorcade, I'm comfortable in my seat.

Give me a horse when the sun begins to set.

I'll take my sweetheart on a ride, she won't forget, you bet.

Give me a horse in the Springtime or the Fall.

I'll ride him in the Summer heat, and the Winter winds do call.

Give me a horse when my trail comes to an end.

I'll ride into the sunset, There I'll trade him with a Friend.

He'll give me a horse that I'll ride through endless day.
There, I'll trail His white horse, For I know HE knows the way.

Attention Horse Owners! Confirmed West Nile Virus Case!

The Kansas Horse Council and Kansas Department of Agriculture Division of Animal Health want to make it aware to all horse owners that a case of West Nile Virus (WNV) in Shawnee County has been confirmed in one horse. If you or anyone you know has horses, read this statement from the KDA with information about WNV!

West Nile Virus Confirmed in Horse in Shawnee County

MANHATTAN, Kansas — The Kansas Department of Agriculture Division of Animal Health has received notification of a confirmed case of West Nile virus (WNV) in a horse in Shawnee County.

"West Nile virus is a preventable disease, and we know that annual vaccinations have proven highly effective for horses," said Kansas Animal Health Commissioner Justin Smith. "Unfortunately, the infected animal had not been vaccinated for this virus. We strongly encourage all horse owners to consult with your local veterinarian and make a vaccination plan for your horses."

WNV is a virus that can infect humans, horses, birds and other species. Horses infected with WNV can have symptoms that range from depression, loss of appetite and fever to severe neurologic signs such as incoordination, weakness, inability to rise, and hypersensitivity to touch or sound. WNV can be fatal in horses. If you see symptoms of WNV in your horse, contact your veterinarian immediately.

The virus is carried and transmitted by mosquitoes; although both horses and humans are susceptible, it is not directly contagious from horse to horse or from horse to human. Horse owners should work diligently to reduce the mosquito populations and their possible breeding areas, including removing stagnant water sources and using mosquito repellents. WNV is a reportable disease in Kansas, which means the law requires any confirmed case must be reported to the KDA Division of Animal Health.

For more information about West Nile virus or other animal disease issues in Kansas, go to the KDA Division of Animal Health website at www.agriculture.ks.gov/AnimalDiseases. Information about WNV risk for humans can be found on the Kansas Department of Health and Environment website at www.kdheks.gov/epi/arboviral disease.htm.

If you are a horse owner traveling, please be aware of your horses health as there have been confirmed cases of WNV in Colorado, Washington, Oklahoma, Oregon and California. As well as, Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE) in Arkansas and Minnesota.

As an owner it is good to be aware of all the signs and symptoms of different diseases. The Kansas Horse Council and Kansas Department of Agriculture Division of Animal Health want to remind owners all over the state to be proactive in trying to prevent disease outbreaks across the state.

If you ever have any questions, please don't hesitate to contact the Horse Council via phone or email!
