FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

“Sacrifice & Light” - Photographer Capturing Portraits of Health Care Workers from Around the World

Press Release

Milford, Delaware, April 18, 2020 — John Mollura is a professional photographer based in Milford, Delaware USA who specializes in creative portraits. He is documenting the stories that health care workers across the planet have witnessed during the COVID-19 outbreak.

Through video chat, using a Zoom video meeting, he creates portraits of health care workers, projected onto hospital scrubs. He combines that image with the stories of positivity that they have witnessed during the outbreak and the sacrifices that they are making during this challenging time.

The inspiration for this project were the stories that he heard from his own friends in health care. One of his closest friends who works in a hospital would not sleep in the same room as her husband for fear of exposing him. Another friend confided that she had not hugged her son or husband in weeks.

These stories haunted John. He wanted to provide an outlet for health care workers to share their experiences and pair them with impactful photographs. Thus, his “Sacrifice & Light” Project was born.

Because taking photographs in person is not possible, he devised a way to create portraits remotely with Zoom and a projector. The photoshoot itself takes mere minutes to complete.

The image can also be anonymous; the participant can be photographed with a mask on and their identity kept confidential.

Participants from all over the world are encouraged to participate. Times are provided throughout the day to accommodate people in other time zones. When participants schedule their photoshoot via the link below, they will be asked to provide their stories of “Sacrifice & Light”. The portrait and story are then posted to social media and the subject receives a high-resolution digital file of the final image.

There is no charge for participation in this project.
