

A Little Light History

The PNP Light Station circa 1890

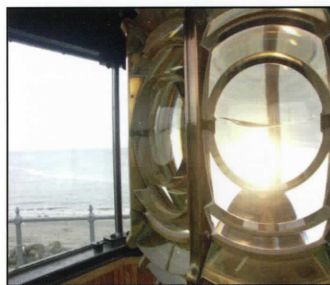

Washington's Point No Point Light Station is the oldest on Puget Sound. It is located on a low finger of land that the local Native American tribes had given the name Hahd-skus, meaning long nose. The Point No Point Treaty was signed on the spit in 1855 by Territorial Governor Isaac Stevens and leaders of S'klallam, Skokomish and Chimacum tribes.

The lighthouse has been in continuous operation, providing navigational aid to mariners since its completion in 1879 (with the Fresnel lens operable by early 1880). Currently, it is lit with an automated acrylic lens.

Point No Point Lighthouse is the only lighthouse accessible to the public in Kitsap County. The light station property, managed by the Kitsap County Parks, is located in Hansville. It is listed in the Washington State Heritage Register and the National Register of Historical Places.

Along with the tower and the adjacent oil house, other original buildings still exist. The keeper's quarters serves two purposes: one half is the U.S. Lighthouse Society Office, the other half a vacation rental. The museum gift store is located in a repurposed storage building. The lighthouse is open to the public. Please check our website for current days. April through September. School and special tours of ten or more persons are scheduled by emailing: docents@pnplighthouse.com

Friends of Point No Point

The mission of this chapter of the U.S. Lighthouse Society [a 501(c)3 non-profit] is to assist in the interpretation, preservation and restoration of the light station. Our outreach goal also includes involvement in community events, information booths at Farmers Markets and for students: classroom presentations followed by field trips to the lighthouse. We have been the recipient of several Washington State Environmental Programs/Lighthouse License Plate Project grants which have funded such projects as window and door replacement and restoration.
