Shaping the Future of Teaching Together

Founded in 1920, the Association of Teacher Educators (ATE) is the only national organization dedicated exclusively to enhancing teacher education. ATE serves nearly 1,500 members—including K–12 teachers, university faculty, administrators, and education consultants—across 41 regional and state affiliates and U.S. territories. Members benefit from access to professional journals, leadership opportunities, special interest groups, and national conferences .

ATE is committed to promoting advocacy, equity, leadership, and professionalism for teacher educators in all settings, supporting quality education for all learners at all levels

Whether you're a seasoned educator or just starting your career, ATE offers a collaborative community to advance your professional growth and impact the future of education.

GET INVOLVED: BECOME A MEMBER & JOIN A COMMITTEE!

Are you ready to make a bigger impact and help shape the future of teaching? We're inviting passionate individuals to become members and get involved by joining one of our active committees!

2025 ATE Midwest Conference: Research and Innovative Practices in Teaching and Teacher Education

On Friday, April 11, the 28th Annual ATE Midwest Conference was held at Purdue University. The conference was hosted by the Kappa Delta Pi (KDP) Purdue University Chapter and sponsored by Illinois & Indiana Association of Teacher Educators. KDP is the national honor society for Education, and the Purdue chapter supports preservice and in-service teachers, and all undergraduate and graduate Teacher Education majors.

INTERESTED IN THE CONSORTIUM FOR CLINICAL PRACTICE?

The Consortium for Clinical Practice (CCP) is a collaborative consortium that creates and facilitates dialogues that reflect and celebrate research-based clinical practices for those involved in any and all aspects of teacher education. The Consortium is formally known as National Directors of Field Experiences (NDFE).
