The Dictionary was based on a collection of Natchilingmiutut terminology collected by Miriam Nilaulaaq Aglukkaq over many years. Because terminology is continually being added to this dictionary, each updated version has more terms.

Iguaqšuqti: Natchlingmiutut Kitqikhautit

Iguaqšuqti is a term that is used to describe a younger person guiding a blind person to where they want to go. It could also be used to describe a seeing-eye dog. Tommy Tavalok, of Gjoa Haven, chose this name for the first publication of this dictionary, as the dictionary was acting like a guide for the Natchlingmiutut to be accurately documented according to the spoken language. A large part of the project involved providing additional symbols in both Roman and Syllabic writing systems, in order to record and see all the sounds of each word. (see page 5)

It was almost 20 years ago, that we were approached by Miriam Aglukkaq/Nilaulaaq, asking for our help to create a dictionary of the Natchilingmiutut words that she had been collecting for many years.

Having been an Inukttut language teacher in the communities of Talurřuaq and Uqšuqtuuq for many years, Miriam has always been passionate about preserving her Natchilingmiutut dialect for the future generations. She is the team leader for all the Ikajuqtigiit Project work.

The photo on the right was taken in Kuugaarřuk in 2007. With Miriam/Nilaulaaq leading, we gathered with Natchilingmiutut elders, whom we called our professors. These professors generously offered us so much knowledge and terminology.

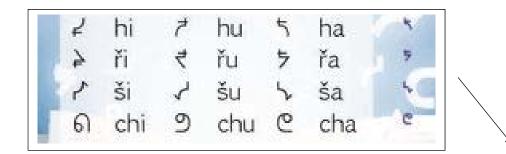

They told us that the reason they wanted to help us so much, is because they did not want Natchilingmiutut to fall behind among the dialects.

Thank you to all the elders of Kuugaarřuk, Talurřuaq and Uqšuqtuuq who provided so much valuable help with this project.

Inuktut Syllabics used in this dictionary

∆רי⊃י ∩∩ק inuktut titirauhiit

This work is the result of community consultations from the Natchilik communities. There was no way to accurately write the Natchilingmiutut dialect using the ICI standard system. The additional Natchilingmiutut sounds have been identified, and there has been agreement in how they can be represented in syllabics. (There may be updated changes in the Roman representation.) The additional syllabic characters all have unicode status since October 2020.

Sound Combinations of n and ng

This chart shows the possible sounds when the two sounds, n and ng, come together in a word:

	n	ng
n	nn	nng
ng	ngn	ngng

	σ	֊Ր
	٩	ະປ
	٩	ზს
Ρ	°σ	ڡ؞
	ڡ	ڡۥ
	ЪЪ	ڡ؞
م	°С	۰۹۲
-	°_O	ၛၛ
	[°] C	ၛၛ

*the sound ng is a single sound in Inuktut

There are four sound combinations formed when the sounds of \mathbf{n} and \mathbf{ng} come together in Natchilingmiutut. Each combination sounds different. This dictionary will write these four sound combinations to match the oral language.

- nn n is voiced twice
- ngn voiced ng, followed by voiced n
- nng voiced n followed by voiced ng
- ngng ng is voiced twice

*Some lnuktut dialects have only two combinations when the sounds of n and ng come together in a word. The combination results in either nn or ngng, due to the practice of gemination of sounds when forming words. These dialects use nng as a short cut for the ngng sound.

However, this is confusing for dialects that pronounce nng and ngng as two different sounds.. Some dialects use n'ng for the combination of n and ng, and continue to use nng for the ngng sound. This is confusing for dialects that actually use a glottal stop as a distinct sound.

So, we had a decision to make, in order to write the sounds to match the oral language with accuracy. Since ng in lnuktut, is one single sound, a double ng is simply two single sounds together, ngng. Another choice to represent this sound could be to use ŋ to replace ng. (ngng could be written as ŋŋ.). We chose to write the double ng sound simply as ngng.

ajuttuqtuq	4 <c,>e</c,>	In the spring, where there is a seal's breathing hole, for example, if it ajuttuq- (ice hole gets bigger), it is said that the hole is ajuřrutiřuq. Another example of its use came from our research [in Kuugaarřuk], where it could refer to the enlargement of a pittaq (which is a hole in any ice that is naturally made), or by a chisel. It was clarified that this term ajuřrutiřuq can also refer to a burrow type hole in the snow that has been made by a person. People would shovel a burrow in the snow to sleep sometimes and it was said they were ajuřrutiřuq, or shovelling the hole wider was ajuřrutilugu. So the term can relate to both ice and snow examples (natural and human-made). A related word is ajuttuqtuq which is what anything is called when its hole or opening has been widened. An example of this is a snow mobile part that has been re-bored; that part is called ajuttuqtuq.

anauligaaq	⊲orris	A ball game with one bat one ball and two bases. Teams are made up of two people, and there can be unlimited teams. Batting team is determined by throwing the ball in the air. A catcher can throw it back, and if the ball is not caught, the thrower and their partner get to run to first base and bat. If they are tagged by the ball before arriving at the base, the tagger gets to be the batting team. If when anyone bats, if they are tagged by the ball while running, the taggers usurp their batting turn. No scores are kept. People just notice who is batting more and running the best, or catching well, etc. It is a game of skill not competition for winning.

seal hunting/ winter/ tools	a small piece of swan skin containing the small down used for winter seal hunting when there is a layer of snow over the ice and seal holes. The one single little piece of down is attached to an instument that indicates the movement of the water as the seals are coming up to breathes	qivviutaq	₽°&⊳⊂∿
seal hunting/ winter/ tools	a tool similar to the qivviutaq. It is a thin metal rod, with a piece of muskox horn attached on the top that a piece of string is attached to. The movement of water as the seal rises to breathe causes the rod to wiggle back and forth. When the rod is pushed up, the hunter harpoons the seal	illaq	∆د⊂ _د ه

seal hunting/ winter/ tools	A winter seal hunting instrument used to determine the centre of a seal hole that is covered with ice amd snow. It is also used for indicating a layer of ice crystal in water, or if the hole is fresh from a seal breathing not long ago.	havgutauřaq	ҕ _ѧ ҀС⊳ _₽ ю
seal hunting/ winter/ tools	a piece of rope made from seal skin with two ends connected together (about 6" diameter.) When the seal is caught, the folded rope end is inserted between the inner lip and teeth (following a knife cut) and continues under the skin to the eye. The folded rope is looped through the other end and this is used to securely pull the seal out of the seal hole.	urhiq	₽٩₽٩
seal hunting/ winter/ tools	Two pieces of wood or antler that have inserts on the top filled with artctic cotton. these are used to hold the harpoon while waiting for a seal. The arctic cotton muffles any sound.	na'maktaq	ڡ′L ^ь C⁵ ^ь

seal hunting/ winter/ tools	A bag for seal hunting tools about two and a half feet square. This is usually made from winter caribou skin taken from the back of a caribou. It is also used for standing on while seal hunting so the hunter does not get cold feet.		ე∪∪∽⊲∾
