

Supplemental Health

The most important things in lives are our health and having the security of knowing that someone's got your back when your in a vulnerable state.

Some people in Métis nation are falling through the cracks due to not being able to access treatments not covered by government healthcare. There is also the added disadvantages that can prevent Métis from accessing healthcare...I believe inadequate budgeting on behalf of the incumbent council has led to cut-backs in supplemental programs and funding for diagnosing and supporting serious health issues like autism. This has had a much larger effect on families and caregivers who rely on a fixed income for a living. The financial costs for some individuals and families to seek help on their own are to high to absorb. In a time when the MN-S council should be stepping up and helping instead taken steps backwards and failing many.

If elected to be the president of the provincial Métis council, I will propose to develop a better MN-S supplemental health system. It will host and help deliver the basic health services to the people of MN-S whom are in need of care.
