

Approach Time: 5 mins
 Aspect: West facing
 Rock type: Rhinog gritstone
 Altitude: 200 metres

Approach: From the car park at the Moelfre view point walk southwards down the road for 200 metres then take the way marked footpath that doubles back rightwards to the lower tier of the crag.

A minor collection of small slabby walls giving some micro routes and boulder problems ideal for a relaxed few hours pottering. Set in a lovely position and only 5 minutes from the road, this is a perfect antidote to a hard day stumbling through the heather, bracken and boulder fields up on the remote crags.

BOG BUTTRESS

Below the lower tier is a solitary buttress sitting next to a boggy area.

LOWER TIER

Although reasonably long the lower tier is generally too broken and vegetated to give much climbing but there are a handful of routes. In the centre there is a prominent clean piece of rock with a distinct flake crack (Why Diddle?).

15 metres left of this is a vague clean rib.

1 Unemployable 6m VD †

The vague rib is a solo.

2 In The Army 7m VS 5a ★ †

Mantle onto the ledge below the flake, step right, make a long reach to a good hold and climb the slab right of the flake (protectable).

FA M Davies 16.9.14

3 Why Diddle? 7m S 4a †

Starting on the right, traverse left along the ledge to below the flake and climb the flake with one tricky move. (protectable).

 DON SARGEANT

8 metres right is a detached shield of rock with ivy growing up its left side.

4 His Nibs 6m HVS 5b ★ †

A nice highball solo. Hard moves up the centre of the shield to a jug then span right to finish.

FA M Davies 16.9.14

25 metres right is a prominent blocky groove.

5 Ogwen Wannabe 7m VD †

Climb the groove (protectable).

FA M Davies 16.9.14

15 metres right is the south facing end wall.

6 End Piece 6m HVS 5a †

The left edge of the wall avoiding the big pedestal on the right. A solo with a poor landing

UPPER TIER

A series of slabby towers.

7 Selfie 7m HS 4b ★ †

The front of the small tower with ivy growing on its right hand side. The hidden crack on its left side gives runners and holds near the start.

8 Careless Orc 7m Font 6b / V4 (!) ★★★ †

The immaculate left arête of the pillar. Tied down spotter useful due to stepped landing. Spring onto the arête and make a technical teeter to reach the jug and easier finish.
