An ASPECT Studios-led team will design the green heart for Bradfield City Centre in Western Sydney.

Our proposal for a city park that embodies the natural beauty of the Cumberland Plain has been selected as the winner of a design competition for the project.

The park will give form to the identity of Bradfield as it develops in tandem with Western Sydney International Airport, providing a place of respite and recreation for an emerging community.

Announced by the NSW Western Parkland City Authority, the winning scheme was designed by ASPECT Studios, architects Collins and Turner, cultural consultant and Baramadagal woman of Dharug Country Jayne Christian, curatorial collaborator Emily McDaniel from the Wiradjuri Nation, artist Janet Laurence, structural engineers Eckersley O'Callaghan and lighting designer Steensen Varming.
