

How to Become a Federal Criminal: An Illustrated Handbook for the Aspiring Offender

SPEAKER BIOGRAPHIES

Mike Chase from @CrimeADay

Attorney Mike Chase--or as you may know him on Twitter, @CrimeADay, will be the Keynote Speaker for the In-House Counsel Enforcement Forum in Atlanta.

Mike Chase is a criminal defense lawyer, humorist and author/illustrator. Mike's work has made him the go-to commentator on the weirdest federal criminal laws buried deep in the books and how they got there. He's been featured on national television and radio, and published in The Wall Street Journal. His book, How to Become a Federal Criminal was published in June 2019.

About the @CrimeADay Project

@CrimeADay is a project with an ambitious mission: count every federal crime on the books. It's something that no one (not even the Department of Justice) has been able to do. Since 2014, @CrimeADay has posted a federal crime on Twitter every single day, usually with a touch of humor. At this rate, some estimates suggest it will take @CrimeADay about 830 years to post every federal crime--assuming no new crimes are created.
